ADMIRAL EATON KILLED BY CHLORAL

BRANDEIS' PLAN ENDS BIG STRIKE

The strike of the girl garment workers, which has been in progress in Boston two weeks, was practically settled today.

A provisional settlement was made by which 5000 women and girls will go back to work Monday. This agreement was reached by international officers of the Ladies's Garment Workers' Union and officers of the Boston Ladies' Garment Manufacturers' Association. The ratification of the agreement will undoubtedly be made at a big mass meeting of the girl strikers to be held at Paine Memorial Building late today.

In addition today, eighteen waist and dress manufacturers who are not in the Employers' Association signed an agreement, putting 55w women and girls back to work Monday. An agreement is yet to be reached with a few small firms outside the association and employing about 900 women and girls. When an agreement between these few firms and the girl strikers is reached, the Boston girls' garment workers' strike of 1913 will be a thing of the past.

Brandeis Plan Adopted.

The agreement made today with the 5,000 workers is based on the Brandeis Plan. It was brought about through the efforts of Meyer Bloomfield in co-operation with Louis D. Brandeis and A. Lincoln Filene. When the strikers and the manufacturers failed to reach an agreement Thursday, Mr. Bloomfield, aided by the others, stepped into the breach and brought about conferences between the two factions. These conferences were held in the office of Attorney Leon E. Ezgee, No. 18 Tremont street. A conference held late last night resulted in the provisional settlement.

A meeting of fifty chairladies and secretaries of the various shops involved was held today at headquarters, No. 31 North Russell street. The terms of the agreement were heartily approved. The terms, which have yet to be ratified by the girls late today, follow:

Pay for cutters $25 a week, for pressers $20, for under pressers $16, for operators who are receiving $10 a week or under an increase of 10 per cent., for operatives receiving over $10 a week an increase of 8 per cent., and for piece workers a 10 per cent. increase.

To Create New Boards.

The peace settlement also calls for the creation of a joint grievance committee, joint board of arbitration and a joint board of sanitation and control. This last board is to be made up of a member of the employers' association, a member of the union and three people representing the general public.

There is one question left unsettled. That concerns pay for holidays. The officers of the union have demanded pay for all legal holidays, but the manufacturers would not agree. A compromise was finally made by which the matter is referred to an arbitration board.

Two Killed By Live Wire At Peabody

Two men were killed and one badly burned today by a charged telegraph pole in front of the plant of the A. C. Lawrence Leather Company on South Liberty street, Peabody.

The dead men are John Harrick, twenty-five years, of 24 Bowditch street, and Thomas Rarmook, thirty, of Lineham court, both of Peabody.

Their companion, George Delansky, twenty-four, of Bowditch place, was badly burned, but is expected to recover.

The men were employed at the Lawrence plant, and were going to their work today. The pole was wound with wire and this became charged from a live wire. Harrick touched the pole and was instantly killed. His companions went to his assistance. Rarmook was killed and Delansky thrown to the ground and his side burned.

Norman White, Head of Economy Board, Resigns

Norman H. White, chairman of the State Commission on Economy and Efficiency, today tendered his resignation to Governor Foss. He states that because he is a candidate for Congress in the Thirteenth District, to succeed John W. Weeks, he feels that he has no right to be paid by the State to hold public office with large political power at the same time.

Mr. White was appointed chairman of the Economy Commission by Governor Foss last December. He was the first Bull Mooser to be given an appointive office in this State. He became a member of the Bull Moose party several months before the presidential election. In 1911 he was a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Mr. White says that until the Governor shall name his successor he will continue to give his time to the work of the commission, but will decline to receive any remuneration.

MAN DIES IN FIRE AT WEST ABINGTON

Beaton was up and started for the street, but was overcome by smoke and fell in the hall. Part of the house was destroyed in the fire.

ROME, March 15.—The United States is referred to as the ideal country for religious freedom, in a papal encyclical issued today from the Vatican. EMBASSY DECLINED BY OLNEY

Richard Olney has declined President Wilson's offer of the Ambassadorship to Great Britain. Mr. Olney has written to the President, the letter reaching the White House today. Mr. Olney in Boston today admitted that he had declined the offer.

Mr. Olney, in his letter to the President, says that he is too old to take up the duties of Ambassador. He is seventy-eight years of age.

Mr. Olney, who was Attorney General and Secretary of State under President Cleveland, was particularly desired for this post by President Wilson, but in his letter to the Chief Executive today he stated that his age precluded his acceptance for him to go to London at this time, even wished to accommodate the President. Mr. Olney thanked the Chief Executive for the honor and added that he would be glad to do anything else in his power to aid the Democratic party.

The refusal of Mr. Olney to become Ambassador to Great Britain was not unexpected. He has just taken up his duties as one of the trustees of the Horatio N. Slater estate, and this with his large active law practice would make it difficult for him to get away.

WARMEST MARCH 15 IN HISTORY OF WEATHER BUREAU

Today was the warmest March 15 in the history of the Boston Weather Bureau. The temperature climbed to 66 early today, while the highest reading ever before recorded for this date was 62 degrees, reached last year. It promises to be the warmest March in the history of the bureau.

Yesterday's temperature was the highest for any day this year, with a maximum of 60 degrees, but that figure was exceeded today.

With its customary perversity, the weather is scheduled to change, however, the local forecast being colder, probably with rain tonight; Sunday fair and much colder, with brisk west to northwest winds.

As a result, Mrs. Anna Middleton, wealthy and prominent in society, is prostrated, while her daughter, now Mrs. William P. Storey, says defiantly that she "doesn't care what people say." Storey's employer, C. H. Butler, is official reporter for the Supreme Court.

PROVIDENCE, March 15.—In the fog which hung over the bay early today the Joy line steamer Georgia, bound in from New York, rammed the collier Seaconnett, anchored off Conimicut light. The Seaconnett was struck amidships and was badly damaged. The Georgia escaped with a twisted stem.

BOY SHOT IN PARK MYSTERY

George A. Davidson, eleven-year-old son of John Davidson, No. 42 School street, Jamaica Plain, was shot down while playing with some of his chums in Franklin Park by a bullet or gunshot from a mysterious source.

No indication of the direction from which the bullet came has been learned by the police. The Davidson boy to at the City Hospital, where an examination is being made to determine whether the wound is from gunshot or bullet. He has a wound in the right abdomen, from which, however, he is expected to recover.

Davidson with half a dozen boys of his own age was romping in the park, near the Walnut avenue entrance. A report as of a gun was heard. The boys looked around wonderingly. It did not seem very far off.

Their attention was suddenly recalled by the groans of the Davidson boy, who was rolling on the ground in pain. Davidson said he heard the shot. Alexis Parsons, twelve, of No. 39 School street, also heard the report.

Harrows ran for a police officer. The other boys scoured around through the woods on the edge of the playground, but were unable to find any trace of the person who fired the shot. None of the boys had a weapon of any sort.

Captain Herriman of the Jamaica Plain police station has detailed two of the Park officers on the case.

CUSHING ADMITS HE IS FIGHTING SCHOOL MEASURE

Speaker Cushing of the House, in a statement to the press today, admits that Mayor Fitzgerald's charge that the Speaker was working against the Mayor's bill to enlarge the membership of the Boston School Committee is true. His statement follows:

The Mayor is quite correct in his statement that I have spoken to a number of the members of the Committee on Cities in opposition to his proposition to enlarge the Boston School Committee.

I served on the School Committee for six years, and was its president for two years; and I have some knowledge of the comparative efficiency of a large and a small board.

During my service in the Legislature I have always interested myself particularly in safeguarding the integrity of the School Committee and of the Boston charter.

As Speaker, I deem it my duty to use my influence to forward good legislation, and to prevent the enactment of what seem to me bad laws; and as such I class the attempt to destroy the present organization of the School Committee.

All the streets and highways from Buckingham Palace to Chingford were draped with flags and lined with soldiers and police.

A special guard of household troop attended the royal carriage to prevent interruption from the militant women who threatened to make another attack on the King. The street were lined with cheering citizens. The new reservoir, which cost $2,500,000, holds 800,000,000,000 gallons of water.

MRS. RALPH L. KEYES, elder step-daughter of late Admiral Eaton, who severely denounces her dead stepfather.

Authorities Order Inquest for Monday in Determined Effort to Fix Blame for Death — Arrest in Assinippi Mystery Now Looked for at Any Moment.

Chloral poisoning caused the death of Rear-Admiral Joseph G. Eaton.

This, it was learned today, was the report submitted by Professor W. F. Whitney of the Harvard Medical School to District Attorney Albert F. Parker of Plymouth County. Mr. Parker is in charge of the investigation into the Admiral's death.

To determine, if possible, how this poison was administered and to place the responsibility, an inquest will be held in the Second Plymouth District Court at Abington next Monday.

CLIMAX IS NEARING.

Either of the special justices of this court, Charles H. Dixon or Edward T. Pratt, will preside.

Presiding Justice George W. Kelley is personal counsel for members of the Eaton family.

An arrest has been momentarily expected.

The case has been approaching a climax for the past forty-eight hours. Pending the report on the analysis of Admiral Eaton's stomach by Professor W. F. Whitney of Harvard Medical School, District Attorney Barker has kept his officials busy covering every line of investigations.

Mrs. Jennie May Harrison Eaton, widow of the dead man, demands, herself, that the authorities take some action, one way or another.

But the official seal of mystery has been kept on the case as tightly as ever. Questioning of the Eaton household has continued. The last one to be interrogated by State Officer John Scott and Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon is Mrs. Ralph F. Keyes of Dorchester, formerly Mrs. June Ainsworth.

Professor William F. Whitney denied today the statement made by Mrs. Ralph F. Keystone that he wrote a letter to Mrs. Eaton in 1909 after his investigation of the death of the adopted infant son of the Eatons that there might have been a subtle poison in the stomach of the child.

In her statement Mrs. Keyes said her mother had received from Professor Whitney a letter in which he said there might have been a subtle poison present.

"You may say for me," said Professor Whitney today, "that so far as I can remember I wrote no letter to Mrs. Eaton, but certainly had there been any trace of poison in the stomach of the child it would have been included in my report to the District Attorney. The story is a fabrication."

Arrest Expected Soon.

The presence of one police official or another in or around the Eaton home on Washington street in the Assinippi district of West Norwell is so constant as to amount almost to a surveillance. This has been the case since Wednesday.

After State Officer Scott and Deputy Sheriff Condon ended their long grilling of the widow and her mother Thursday, and had left the neighborhood, a constable came on the scene.

Yesterday both Scott and Condon were on the premises most of the afternoon and evening. Today Deputy Sheriff Condon came into Assinippi bright and early.

The manner in which this investigation has superseded all other matters at the county prosecutor's office—the District Attorney giving it his entire attention—shows that the officials regard it as the chief issue before them.

Even the United States government has lent its official attention to the case. Dr. Paul P. Dessez of Charlestown Navy Yard has asked Medical Examiner Osgood to keep him posted.

In Assinippi village, where discussion of the Eaton mystery and of the expected arrest are the sole talk, there was a general conviction that the week would not close without some person being taken in custody.

At the Eaton home today the usual household routine was pursued and the care of Mrs. George Harrison, the sick mother of Mrs. Eaton, was pursued as though the home were not the centre of the greatest mystery Plymouth County has known for years.

There is another member of the family present now in the person of Mrs. Keyes, the elder stepdaughter. Mrs. Keyes has attacked a severe denunciation of her dead stepfather.

It was a week ago today that the Admiral died. It was on the same day that the investigation began which—it is dramatic

POLICE PUSH MALDEN GIRL DEATH INQUIRY

With more than 100 friends attending, funeral services were held today for Miss Elizabeth M. Cummings, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Cummings, No. 188 Cross street, Malden. Rev. Charles H. Moss, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating. The services were of a simple nature and the remains were taken to Forestdale Cemetery for burial. Miss Cummings had been active in the work of the First Baptist Sunday School and many of the mourners were members of that body.

Previous to the funeral, Medical Examiner Durell of Somerville, who performed an autopsy on the body Thursday, signed the burial permit, giving the cause of death as "septic peritonitis" or blood poisoning. Dr Durell declined to state what caused the blood poisoning, saying that any statement in the case must necessarily come from the district attorney's office.

At the request of District Attorney Higgins of Cambridge, Inspector George E. Greenleaf and Captain Timothy J. Foley of the Malden police today began a rigid investigation into the movements of the young woman between the time she returned from the Malden Hospital after an operation for appendicitis and the time of her death last Wednesday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock.

B. & M. SLUMP DUE TO NEW HAVEN'S OUTSIDE DEALS, SAYS BRANDEIS

The so-called "knockers" are not to blame for the drop in Boston & Maine Railroad stock, according to Louis D. Brandeis.

In an interview Mr. Brandeis declared that the New Haven management has been bad, that dividends should have been reduced until the equipment had been brought up to the proper level, and that if the New Haven had confined its efforts to building up the road as a railroad and not as a holding company controlling hotels, trolley and steamship lines then the situation today would have been entirely different.

"The New Haven has wasted money like a drunken sailor. It's merely a matter of arithmetic, that's all," said Brandeis.

During the interview Mr. Brandeis stated that the government will undoubtedly split up the New Haven and Boston & Maine merger, because it cannot be allowed to stand in view of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger.

He said: "The transportation monopoly acquired by the New Haven was far more complete than that acquired by the Union Pacific, which raised such protest in California." Mr. Brandeis also said:

It is all nonsense for anyone to claim that the drop in Boston & Maine stock is due to the "knockers." The knockers have not brought about the reduction in market value any more than they have the accidents on the New Haven. The trouble is due to the New Haven methods. It is merely a matter of arithmetic, that's all.

For several years the New Haven has been charging off $1,500,000 or so, too small an amount for depreciation of equipment. This, of course, has meant that the showing made has been deceptive to people who did not stop to go over the figures carefully and analyze them thoroughly.

"Should Be Among Best."

If the dividends had been reduced for a time until the equipment had been brought up to proper level and the roadbed put in proper condition; if the New Haven had confined its efforts to building up the road as a railroad and not as a holding company controlling hotels, trolley and steamship lines, then the situation today would have been entirely different.

These outside interests are no more necessary to a railroad than diamonds to an ordinary citizen; they're nice to have if you can afford them, but they are not necessary.

I do not know of any interests that stand ready to take over the Boston & Maine, provided that the State decides to separate the two roads. It is not to be expected that any interest would make an offer before it was known whether the goods could be delivered. No one would do that, especially as he might encounter the enmity of large and powerful interests to no purpose by so doing.

There is no reason why the New Haven and Boston & Maine should not be among the best roads in the country.

There has been a steady increase of gross revenues; a large increase of freight carried and quite a large increase of passenger revenue. The people of New England acquiesced almost without a murmur in the increase in passenger rates, which yielded to the system nearly $3,000,000 a year additional revenue.

"Sacrifice of B. & M."

Many increases in freight rates were made and accepted without protest, but neither these increases in rates nor the general increase of business could compensate for the wasteful extravagance of the management, in purchasing at exorbitant figures competing companies and in otherwise squandering the companies' funds.

The New Haven has all these years, in spite of inefficient operation, a large return on its investment in its own railroad property. It has lost its money in the outside properties, and when it took over the Boston & Maine it pursued a similar reckless course.

And no consideration of the Boston & Maine's financial condition should omit the wanton sacrifice of its interests to such contracts as were made with the American Express Company by which the railroad is saddled with a twenty-year contract involving a loss to it of over $700,000 a year in net income. The favor granted to the American Express Company was equivalent to more than 2 per cent. dividends on the Boston & Maine stock then outstanding. Of course the railroad property in New England, however good, could stand such management.

Maranville Pewee and James Giant of the Pilgrims

ATHENS, Ga., March 15.—The Boston Nationals have one of the biggest as well as one of the smallest players in baseball. Bill James, the husky pitcher whom Stallings secured from the Seattle Club, is six feet six inches tall and weighs 205 pounds. He has a fine minor league record and should be of great aid to the Pilgrims in this year's pennant race.

Maranville, or "Rabbit" and "Pewee," as he is known to his teammates, is a tiny fellow. He is just five feet five and one-half inches tall and only weighs 143 pounds. He is a grand fielder, but his weight makes it almost impossible for him to become a good hitter.

'Phone Girls Tell Sheriff They Don't Pry in Eaton Case

Boston telephone girls are indignant over the statement attributed to Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon of Rockland that they have been listening at wires over which conversation relative to the Admiral Eaton death mystery has been conducted.

Consumption

The New Sartolin Method Offers Relief with Addition of Certain Advantages Over All Other Methods of Treatment

ITS BEST RECOMMENDATION:

NOT A LIFE WAS LOST

The Berlin Medical Association made an official test of SARTOLIN on the worst cases of consumption. Its report can be had for the asking —write for it. It makes inspiring reading for anxious people.

In many cases, the cough, night sweats, expectoration, headache, nervousness and stomach disturbances were overcome in two to four weeks, and though the cases selected were judged as very serious (many hopeless) not one life was lost!

In their place was substituted a ravenous and exhilarating appetite, undisturbed, refreshing sleep, and the strength and energy to labor. Think of sending men and women who had been given up to die back to work.

These results were secured, not on picked cases, but for some of this world's neediest sufferers. Furthermore, they were obtained without the use of any injections, opiates or internal medicine—a remarkable achievement, as any physician will tell you. Ask yours. And not a single individual was sent to a sanitarium, or made to change his or her mode of life in any material respect. They were simply given Sartolin to use, as you can use it, at home.

The official account described above shows Sartolin to be not only a very quick acting and powerful restorative, but also a most convenient, safe, and pleasant method of treatment. It also positively protects the associates of the sufferer from all danger of infection. This fact without any further evidence sufficiently demonstrates its anti-tubercular virtues, and should inspire all sufferers with any form of serious lung trouble to know more about it. These particulars may be obtained, sent sealed and prepaid, on request. Get them and read the established facts. SARTOLIN, (Inc.) Dept. 402 B, 205 N. 5th Ave., Chicago.

NEW CAR SERVICE.

Beginning on Monday morning a car hourly during the night is to be operated between Melrose Highlands and Boston by the Bay State Street Railway Company.

CHARITIES AND WOMEN HIT BY B. & M. SLUMP

Widows and aged people, churches, hospitals, missionary societies, homes for the aged and other charities in New England, are all hit by the sudden slump in the Boston & Maine Railroad stock, which has dropped as low as $70 per share for the common stock.

Scores of women and the trustees of little properties placed their accumulations in Boston & Maine stock years ago because it had a dividend record uninterrupted since 1842 and even running back to 1838 when the corporation was the Andover & Haverhill Railroad.

Most of these people hold blocks of eight and ten shares of stock, bought when it was paying 8 to 10 per cent. dividends and when prices per share were from $180 to $230. Probably not a share of the stock held by the public institutions was bought at par, $100. It was purchased not as a speculation, but for investment; thus every point that the stock drops means the loss of money by New England interests.

Substantially all of the big interests, save the Boston Holding Company, are out of the Boston & Maine. President Mellen owns 133 shares only. Of the numerous large blocks that once were held, only that of the estate of Samuel C. Lawrence, with something more than 7,000 shares, and two trusts in Portland aggregating 4,000 shares, remain.

Of the holdings left in the hands of individuals and trustees there are fewer than fifty who hold 200 shares or more. The stock book contains the names of hundreds of stockholders who carry from one to twenty-five shares each.

Fully 50 per cent. of these small shareholders are women, and 95 per cent. live in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine.

One woman living in a Boston suburb owns 1,429 shares, another holds 700, while a woman living in a small New Hampshire town has 512. But as a rule fifty shares is a large possession for a woman stockholder of the Boston & Maine.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions holds thirty-eight shares, and the American Unitarian Association is on the books for 200 shares. The Board of Ministerial Aid of Roxbury invested in fifty-three shares.

Among the church funds represented are: Congregational Society of Newburyport, five shares; Congregational Church of Durham, N. H., fifty-eight shares, and the Congregational Society, in trust, sixteen and six shares; Congregational Society of Stratham, N. H., five shares; Evangelical Congregational Church of Seabrook, N. H., twelve shares; First Parish of Exeter, N. H., four shares; First Unitarian Society of Christians, Dover, N. H., nine shares; First Congregational Church and Society of Acton, Me., nine shares; Congregational Society of Ellsworth, ten shares; Congregational Society of Hampton Falls, N. H., one share; First Parish in Cambridge, fifty shares; First Church in Dorchester, ten shares.

Josiah Quincy, twice Mayor of Boston, and the only one of the four defendants who was acquitted, declared that he would personally assist in the preparation of the papers for the appeal.

Expert Discovers Germ That Causes Infant Paralysis

BALTIMORE, Md., March 16.—Before an audience that packed the medical auditorium of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for Scientific Research, announced he had discovered, isolated, cultivated and photographed the germ of infantile paralysis. The announcement was greeted as a great step in medical research.

Illustrating with micro photographs, Dr. Flexner said the germ was one of the smallest ever identified. As shown on the screen, in an enlarged view of a section of spinal cord infected with it, the germ appeared in a chain-like form in a wavy line.

Dr. Flexner said he had not been able to establish the fact that infection was caused by the table fly, though he had no doubt Dr. Rosenau of Washington had done so.

He said he had employed other insects, which were allowed to bite monkeys infected with the disease, and that the insects thus became infected for eight days, but he had not succeeded in reversing the process.

Dr. Flexner said that in cultivating the germ a medium freed from oxygen had been found necessary and that the germ never would be found in blood nor in any cavity containing oxygen. He had placed the virus in a receptacle from which the air had been drawn by a vacuum pump.

Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Sanitarium Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished in from One to Five Days at Home.

The Elders Sanitarium, located at 665 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a free book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be banished in from one to five days at home.

Many who have used tobacco for more than fifty years have tried this method and say it is entirely successful, and in addition to banishing the desire for tobacco has improved their health wonderfully. This method banishes the desire for tobacco, no matter whether it is smoking, chewing, cigarettes or snuff dipping.

As this book is being distributed free, anyone wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

MORGAN NEARLY WELL NOW, SAYS H. L. SATTERLEE

ROME, March 15.—J. Pierpont Morgan has recovered from the effects of his recent illness, according to the statement of H. L. Satterlee, son-in-law of the financier, who is here with him. Said Mr. Satterlee:

Mr. Morgan has recovered from the effects of his illness. He has been separately examined by three doctors, Dr. Tribe, a physician at Cairo; Professor Bastianelli and his old friend Dr. Dixon. His blood has been analyzed and his case very carefully diagnosed. The doctors agree that Mr. Morgan's constitution is perfect and his organs are in the normal condition of a man ten years younger than he is.

The only care he needs is absolute rest and quiet, and therefore he is not taking any medicine. He is already so much improved that he has got over the first phases of his illness, which consisted of sleeplessness, loss of appetite and weakness. He is now sleeping nine hours at a stretch, is recovering his appetite and is resuming his usual health and vigor. It is not necessary to consult any more doctors.

The autocratic doctors who are attending Mr. Morgan have ordered him to give up smoking, his favorite pleasure, and Mr. Morgan is very, very sad.

For years his chief luxury has been long, black cigars, especially made for him at a cost of one dollar a piece. They are even better than the King of England or the Czar of Russia smokes. Each cigar is made of tobacco especially grown, watercously cured and rolled into cigars by the most expert workmen. These cigars are carefully aged and when mellow find their way into the Morgan humidors. They are the most famous cigars in the world.

The statement is correct, that this is the greatest selling cigarette in this country!

GIRL WITH X-RAY EYES PERFORMS AMAZING FEATS

Beulah Miller, the child psychic, of Warren, R. I., who has amazed such eminent psychologists as Professor Munsterberg and Professor James Hyslop, president of the American Society for Psychical Research, has the X-ray sight.

Cloth, pasteboard or any other opaque material presents no obstacle to her sight. She can tell you what you have in your pocket as well as if she were looking at it in your hand.

A pack of cards to Beulah can be read from the back as well as by their face. And this she accomplishes not by any thought transference but, in the opinion of the famous scientists who have experimented with her, simply by her marvellous power of X-ray sight.

Stands Two-Hour Test.

Beulah demonstrated her wonderful gift to Dr. John B. Quackenbos, the eminent New York psychologist, at an exhibition in his home.

With hardly the slightest hesitation she told the number of spots on cards taken at random from a pack and placed face down on shelf or table.

She told the exact amount of money each of the witnesses present had in their pocket. She even told the exact age of Mrs. Quackenbos. And more marvelous still Mrs. Quackenbos admitted the age was true.

For two hours this little find of the AMERICAN amazed doubting witnesses by her feats of sight. There was no possibility of fraud. The doctor and witnesses tried to thwart her in every conceivable way. It didn't work. The child came through with the proof every time.

Beulah was sent to the rear of the Quackenbos library where the two-hour examination took place. While her back was turned Mrs. Quackenbos arranged a pack of cards in rows on a table. Asked how many rows there were, Beulah answered "Three." The answer was correct.

Dr. Quackenbos selected a card at random from the pack and showed it to the other members of the company. Then he buried it in the pack again and asked Beulah to name it.

"King" Was Right.

"It was a king," she said. "Wasn't that right, Bub? A king?" That indeed was the card.

This might have been a case of thought transference. So the doctor sent Beulah from the room in company with his daughter. He selected a card, the identity of which he did not know himself. No one else in the room did, either.

Miss Quackenbos was called and returned leading Beulah who was talking delightedly about a cat and dog she had seen in the basement.

"We have selected a card, Beulah. Can you tell us what it is?" said the psychologist.

After about 75 seconds of thought Beulah replied, "Four. It's a four, ain't it? It's red. I think it's a diamond. But I can't tell for sure whether it's diamonds or hearts. But it's a four and it's red.

Eagerly several of the company went to the mantel and turned the card over. It was the four of hearts.

The last and most severe test Dr. Quackenbos put Beulah to was to name a curious object he had carried in his pocket for scores of years.

Beulah began to spell. She just spelled without seeming to know what the spelling meant.

"B," she began. "Is that right?"

Reassured, she spelled B-U-T-T-O-N.

"No, that's not right," said the doctor. The child bent her head alert, added: "There's a H and an O and a K."

Dr. Quackenbos pulled from his pocket a curiously-shaped buttonhook he had carried for years.

Beulah had convinced him beyond a shadow of doubt.

Lina Cavalieri, the famous beauty and grand opera singer, according to a dispatch today from Detroit, is to be married March 28 to Lucien Muratore, the French tenor who is accompanying her on her present concert tour. Both are in Boston today. Mme. Cavalieri is ill at her hotel.

The information was received in Detroit by the advance agent of the singers, who stated he had received instructions to arrange for the wedding on that date, when they are scheduled to give a concert in the armory of the Detroit Light Guard.

REFORMERS TO FIGHT REVERE BOARD MONDAY

Charging as he did that certain persons paid for the privilege of conducting automobile stands in the beach section, the declaration of Alexander Rampell, an automobile owner, made at last Wednesday night's session of the Revere Board of Selectmen, that he will produce the evidence at the board meeting next Wednesday, is today causing earnest and widespread discussion in that town.

Coupled with Rampell's charges is the rumor that District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier may be appealed to in an effort to solve the puzzling attitude of Selectman Louis E. Vincent, Republican, whose somersaults on votes in the Board the town have baffled Revere citizens.

Perhaps the most important feature of the town meeting Monday night will be the make-up of the budget. Yesterday, it is claimed, the new superintendent of streets, John V. Fitzgerald, discharged everybody in his department, retaining only those in the ash division of the Highway Department. This course was taken, it is claimed, because the appropriation ran out.

The fiscal year of the town departments ended last month. The school teachers have not, it is charged, received their salaries for several weeks, pending this year's appropriation for the School Department. The appropriation for other different departments will, it is expected, be made Monday night.

Alleged illegal liquor selling, gambling and the inefficiency of the Police Department, it is claimed, will come in for severe censure.

On top of Vincent's change of votes for chairman of the Board and superintendent of streets came the sensational announcement that he had been drugged and tortured following the first session of the Board. Again, last Wednesday, he showed up at the second session of the Board with his arm in a sling, leading many of his constituents to suppose that the stories circulated about him were true. To cap the climax, he was reported yesterday confined to a bed outside Revere, which was confirmed by his brother, Arthur. Last night the latter said that the Selectman was home again. He declined to an AMERICAN reporter:

Mr. Brother (Selectman Vincent) has returned home. He is out. I do not know where he went. I refuse to answer any more questions.

'PHONE GIRLS CUT FINERY TO HELP STRIKERS

What the 2,500 telephone girls can save on Easter finery to help the 6,000 garment working girls on strike. These figures are based on what an ordinary working girl pays for clothing.

What articles of clothing for a working girl cost:

Hats, $3.98 to $10.

Suits, $15 to $25.

Shoes, $3 to $5 a pair.

Gloves, 79 cents to $1.50.

Stockings, lisle thread, 25 cents, to $1.50 for silk.

What a working girl can save for her working sister:

On hats, 50 cents to $1.00; average 50 cents.

On suits, $1 to $3; average $2.

On shoes, 50 cents to $1; average 50 cents.

On gloves 25 cents; average 25 cents.

On stockings, 25 cents to 50 cents; average 37½ cents.

Average saving of one girl, $3.62½.

Saving of 2,500 telephone girls (2,500 times $3.62½) equals $9,062.50.

Twenty-five hundred telephone girls of Greater Boston are going to give nearly $10,000 to help their striking sisters among the garment workers.

They are going to do it by cutting down the price of their Easter finery.

They are going to do it at the request of Miss Annie E. Mather, president of the Telephone Operatives' Union. They have already given her their promise.

They are furthermore going to cut down on amusement expenses. The money which was to be used for a party at union headquarters next Friday will be donated to the girl strikers.

The telephone girls, recalling their own troubles some months ago, are sympathetic and will try to prevail on all other women in Boston to do as they are doing.

Thousands of dollars will pour into the funds of the garment workers if all the women of Boston cut down only a small part of their Easter expense. The telephone girls say they have sounded the men on this question and find they are backed up almost to a man.

POLICE CALLED OUT IN COLLIERY STRIKE

SCRANTON, Pa., March 15.—A riot squad of police was necessary early today to restore order at the Oxford colliery, West Scranton, where 400 men went on strike yesterday. Henry Heap, a mine foreman, was arrested by the police, who found a revolver on his person. Heap explained that he attacked him while he was on his way to work.

London Bishop Tells of Healing Girl by Prayer

LONDON, March 15.—The Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington Ingram, Bishop of London, has just made public the following remarkable experience. He said:

I was called to the bedside of a girl, seriously ill in Knightsbridge from a nervous breakdown. The child had been raving and shrieking. The mother, nurse and I knelt by her bed and had two prayers. I anointed her forehead with oil, prayed for a blessing on it, placed my hand upon her head and gave her my blessing. At that moment she sank back into a deep sleep, and—thank God—if it be His good pleasure, she is now on the way to recovery.

BURY MISS O'MEARA, CHORUS GIRL WHO DIED IN MYSTERY

The funeral of Miss Esther O'Meara, the Boston chorus girl who died under suspicious circumstances at Savannah, Ga., was held in St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury. Many theatrical people playing in Savannah sent floral tributes, which came to Boston with the body. Miss O'Meara was born in Roxbury and many friends called at the undertaking rooms before the funeral.

Miss O'Meara was taken ill in Savannah a week ago. It is charged by the Savannah police that "Doc" Silva gave her morphine to deaden the pain. Miss O'Meara was rooming with a Miss Bessie Corey, and they went to their room.

Miss O'Meara soon became unconscious and died at a hospital, to which she was removed. Miss Corey is held as a witness, and Silva is also being held, charged with causing the death of Miss O'Meara.

RUSSELL, WHO WAS FOUND, IS AGAIN MISSING

Clifton B. Russell, the Marlboro Bank treasurer, who was located in Winnipeg, Canada, after a mysterious disappearance, has again dropped from sight.

The Imperial express from Winnipeg, due at Toronto at 3:25 yesterday, on which Russell had stated that he would travel, arrived several hours late and the man was not aboard. Two friends and brother Masons, Arthur C. Lamson and Charles S. Thompson, were on hand in Toronto when the train came in, but search failed to disclose Russell. The two men wired to friends today that they would return to Marlboro over a different route from the one they took going up, and hope to find Russell somewhere on the way back.

Russell left his home last Tuesday and for several days a search was made for him in many cities and towns. It was said that Russell was caused much anxiety by an insurance business which he recently purchased, and this was given as a reason for his sudden leave-taking.

Letters dated at Boston were received from him, and later he wired his wife that he was in Winnipeg and was coming back. Arrangements were then made for Mr. Lamson and Mr. Thompson to meet him in Toronto.

'CASCARETS' MAKE YOU FEEL GREAT

A Ten-Cent Box Will Keep Your Liver, Stomach and Bowels Clean for Months.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver, delayed fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Salts, cathartic pills, oil and purgative waters force a passageway for a day or two—yes—but they don't take the poisons out and have no effect upon the liver or stomach.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from any druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels clean and regular for months.

THE HOUSE ON THE MARSH

A Celebrated Novel by Florence Warden

PART I.

I COULD feel the blood rushing to my cheeks, but I was indignant at having to submit to his catechism.

"Mr. Rayner never asks impertinent questions," I said, severely.

The young man, drew back and muttered, "I beg your pardon," and, turning to watch the rain, began to hum something, without any tune, to cover his discomfiture.

I considered for a moment and then said, rather timidly:

"Won't you tell me anything more? You can if you will, I think, and, alone in the world as I am, I want all the knowledge I can get of the people I live among to guide me in my conduct."

He seemed to debate with himself for a moment; then he sat down beside me on the other shaft of the cart and said very earnestly:

"Seriously, then, Miss Christie, I would advise you to leave the Alders as soon as you possibly can, even before you get another engagement. You are in the midst of more danger than you can possibly know of myself, more, certainly, than I can warn you against."

His voice was very low as he finished, and, while we both sat silent, he with his eyes intently fixed on my face, mine staring out fearfully at the sky, a dark figure suddenly appeared before us blocking the light. It was Mr. Rayner. Mr. Reade and I started guiltily. The new comer had approached us so quietly that we had not heard him; but had he heard us?

Words Dispelled Fear

In spite of the rain and mud, Mr. Rayner was in the brightest of humors; and his first words dispelled my fear that he might have overheard the warning Mr. Reade had just given me not to stay at the Alders. He caught sight of me first as he came under the roof of the dark shed.

"At last, Miss Christie! It was a happy thought of mine to look for you here, but how in the world did you discover this place of refuge?"

Then, turning, he saw my companion. "Hello, Laurence! Ah, this explains the mystery! You have been playing the knight errant, I see, and I am too late in the field; but I shall carry off the lady after all. My wife noticed that you started without your sister, Miss Christie, and, as soon as service was over she sent me off with it to meet you."

He helped me on with it, and then I stood between them, silent and rather shy at receiving so much unaccustomed attention, until the rain began to fall less heavily, and we seized the opportunity to escape. When we got in sight of the park Mr. Reade wanted to take a short cut through it to the house, but Mr. Rayner avowed there was no object to be gained by catching a bad cold wading through the long, wet grass, so we all went together as far as the park gates, where Mr. Reade left us.

As we walked down the path I saw a woman's figure among the trees on our right. The storm had left the evening sky so dark and she was so well hidden that if I had not been very sharp-sighted I should not have noticed her. As it was, I could not recognize her, but could only guess that it was Mrs. Rayner. The idea of those great weird eyes beaming upon me, watching me, just as they had been on the evening of my arrival, made me feel uncomfortable. I was glad Mr. Rayner did not look that way, but went on quietly chatting until we reached the house. He left me in the hall and went straight into his study, while I, before going upstairs to take off my bonnet, went into our little schoolroom to put my church service away.

The French window had not been closed, and I walked up to it to see whether the rain had come in. The sky was still heavy with rain clouds, so that it was quite dark indoors, and, while I could plainly see the woman I had noticed among the trees forcing her way through the wet branches, stepping over the flower beds onto the lawns, and making her way to the front of the house, she could not see me.

When she came near enough to me to distinguish her figure, I saw that it was not Mrs. Rayner, but Sarah, the housemaid.

I stood, without acknowledging it myself, rather in awe of this woman; she was so tall and so thin, and had such big, eager eyes and such a curiously constrained manner. She was only a few steps from the window where I stood completely hidden by the curtain when Mr. Rayner passed quickly and caught her arm from behind. She did not turn or cry out, but only stopped short with a gasp.

"What were you doing in the shrubbery just now, Sarah?" he asked. "If you want to take fresh air in the garden you must keep on the lawn and the paths. By forcing your way through the trees and walking over the beds you do damage to the flowers—and to yourself. If you cannot remember these simple rules, you will have to look for another situation."

She turned around sharply.

"Another situation! Me!"

"Yes, you. Though I should be sorry to part with such an old servant. Yet one may keep a servant too long."

"Old! I wasn't always old," she broke out, passionately.

"Therefore you were not always in receipt of such good wages as you get now. Go in and get tea ready. And take care the least is not burnt again."

Black Eyes Glared

I could see her glare at him with her great black eyes like a tigress at bay, but she did not dare to answer again, but sunk away, cowed, into the house. I was not surprised, for the tone of cold command with which he spoke those last insignificant words inspired me with a sudden sense of fear of him, with a feeling that I was face to face with an irresistible will such as I should have thought it impossible for light-hearted Mr. Rayner to inspire.

The whole scene had puzzled me a little. What did Sarah, the housemaid, want to stand like a spy in the shrubbery for? How had Mr. Rayner seen and recognized her without seeming even to look in that direction? Was there any deeper meaning under the words that had passed between them?

The next morning, as I put on a dainty China blue cotton frock that I had never worn before, I could not help noticing how much better I was looking than when I lived in London. Instead of being pale, I had a pink color in my cheeks, and my eyes seemed to look larger and brighter than they used to.

Before breakfast I went into the garden, where Mr. Rayner was admiring the roses and the morning itself. Then we went back to the house. We had sauntered back to the dining room window and there, staring out upon us in a strange, fixed way, was Mrs. Rayner. She continued to look at us, and especially at me, as if fascinated, until we were close to the window, when she turned with a start and when we entered the latent expression had faded from lustreless eyes and she was her usual lifeless self again.

EASY MONEY IN AMERICAN'S NEW CONTEST

Here's Ready Money for American readers.

It is very easy to get, too.

In another part of today's AMERICAN will be found details of our new Ready Money contest—a contest that in its simple as it is far reaching. It is a contest that every reader of the AMERICAN will find interesting, as well as offering an easy opportunity to win cash and other prizes.

The idea of a Ready Money contest was suggested by the amusing comedy, "Ready Money," which is now playing at the Shubert Theatre. It is a very funny play, and you should see it. By seeing it you will be better prepared to answer the question upon which this contest is based.

Do Women Like Money More Than Do Men?

That's the question we would like to have our readers answer.

In the play there is a young man who is poor, and who is, consequently, despised by the ambitious mother of the girl he loves. Then everybody thinks he has found wealth, and the mother's objection to him vanishes.

But his wealth was not real—it was counterfeit. And upon that situation the author wrote the funniest play of he season.

Now, everybody has some answer to the question that is asked—do women love money more than do men?

Let's have your answer.

Here are the prizes:

First prize—$10 and two seats to "Ready Money."

Second prize—$8 and two seats to "Ready Money."

Third prize—$5 and two seats to "Ready Money."

Fourth prize—$3 and two seats to Ready Money."

Fifth prize—$2 and two seats to "Ready Money."

Sixth to fifteenth prizes—Two seats to each winner to "Ready Money."

The conditions of the contest are:

1—The essay must not exceed 250 words in length.

2—It must give the name and address of the writer.

3—It must reach the AMERICAN office not later than 10 o'clock, Thursday morning, March 20.

Wishes to Tell You FREE

How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By All Means Write to Her and Learn How She Did It.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 106 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a very hard drinker. His case seemed a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife, in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which made him loathe liquor, stopped his drinking entirely.

To make sure that the remedy was responsible for this happy result, she also tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes everyone who has drunkenness in their homes to try this simple remedy, for she feels sure that it will do as much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell, do not send any money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly.

The couple also will have to wait for a Jewish rabbi as, under the law, he is the only one who can perform the ceremony.

EXPERT TESTIFIES RAILROAD FIREMEN ARE UNDERPAID

NEW YORK, March 15.—That railroad firemen have not received their share of the revenue going which the Eastern railroads have made in the past ten years, was the testimony offered by W. J. Lauch, a statistician, before the arbitration board hearing the dispute between the firemen and the railroads. Chairman Chambers of the board said that the prosperity of the road, one way or the other, would not affect the ruling of the board.

SCHOOLBOYS CLASH IN ANNUAL GAMES AT SOUTH ARMORY

GARDNER IS TO TEND GOAL FOR B. A. A. TONIGHT

The Lineup:

B. A. A.		ALL STARS.
Osgood	F.W.	Baker
Clifford	F.W.	Oliver
Hicks	C.	Marston
Richardson	D.W.	Cunningham
Huntington	G.	Irons
Morgan	G.	Irons
Gardner	G.	Irons

The B. A. A. hockey team will be strengthened for its game with the Winnipeg All-Stars tonight at the Boston Arena by the substitution of Captain Harry Gardner of the Harvard seven, at goal for "Skeet" Canterbury.

Gardner is recognized as the best goaltender in this country, and in placing him on the team tonight Coach Winsor adds mightily to the defence of the local seven. The only other change from the regular lineup as played all season by the Exeter street club boys will be the substitution of Johnny Heron at point for Newt Fisher, who is out of town. Leslie will start the game at left wing, but will give way later to Forrest Osgood.

The B. A. A. team realizes that the All-Stars is a fast and clever hockey aggregation, despite its defeat by the Pilgrim A. A. seven Thursday night, and the men will play their hardest from start to finish. The team watched the Canterbury night game and made allowances for the long trip of the visitors.

The All-Stars arrived in Boston Thursday morning after a trip of about 4,000 miles, and with a record of having played six games in ten days. They clearly showed the strain in the game against the Pilgrims. They weakened considerably in the second half of that contest and were not physically fit to meet the speedy work of the local forwards.

LAWRENCE ACADEMY ARRANGES GAMES

Manager J. E. Cameron of the Lawrence Academy baseball team has arranged a very attractive schedule of games for his team and predicts a successful season. The schedule is as follows:

April 16, Middlesex; April 19, Clinton High; April 23, Lowell Textile; April 28, Waltham High; April 30, Worcester Academy; May 3, Worcester Englis, High; May 7, Allen School; May 10, Exeter; May 14, Lowell High; May 17, Groton School; May 21, Tufts School; May 24, Worcester Academy; May 28, Tufts School; June 14, Milton High; June 17, Milton High; June 19, open; June 18, Commencement games.

66 COLLEGE RELAY TEAMS IN GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, March 15.—The number of colleges that have entered for the annual relay races of the University of Pennsylvania here on April 26, now stands at sixty-five. This is said to be the largest number of colleges entered for any meet in the history of the sport. Every large university in the country, with the exception of Cornell, Leland Stanford and the University of California, has sent entries.

BOSTON COLLEGE IS WINNER OF GAME

The Boston College freshmen five decisively defeated the Boston University quintet yesterday afternoon at Steger Hall for the second time this season, 34 to 19. The B. U. team recently won the championship of the B. U. league, but it was thought that it was in condition to beat the James street team.

STALLINGS AND BAND FORCED TO GIVE UP PRACTICE

College Parade Grounds May Be Used if the Rain Ever Lets Up.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

ATHENS, Ga., March 15.—The strenuous week with a game every day between two teams, which Manager Stallings had planned for his ballplayers, has failed to materialize. Jupiter Pluvius, that old standby of the baseball writers, is to blame. He has soaked this territory good and plenty, playing almost continually for a week. As a result, half day practice sessions have been the rule with no practice at all on some days. But whenever there has been the slightest opening the players have taken advantage of it.

A. H. C. MITCHELL

If the college grounds were too muddy or the old ball park was too wet, the squad has used the college parade ground. But even the parade ground, which is on high land, was found to be too slippery for infield practice the last time the squad went there, so the boys had to be content with tossing the ball.

Men in Good Condition.

The catchers managed to perfect themselves in their signals but there was no batting done whereat there was weeping and gnashing of teeth for every ball player likes to have his lamps well trimmed so that he may get his dearly beloved base hit.

The team, as a whole, however, is in very good physical condition. The chances are that rain has prevailed at all the Southern training camps so that the Boston Club is no worse off than its rivals. There are a few sore arms, to be sure, but that is to be expected, no matter whether it rain or shines. Sore arms are a part of Spring training. There is nothing serious the matter with any of the salary wings in this camp; nothing but what a few warm sunshiny days will the proper use of the arms will eliminate.

Paresis Poker Is Still King

The idleness enforced by the rains has given the players a chance to perfect themselves in paresis poker, which still continues to be the principal method of amusement in camp. Most of those who pay have at last succeeded in figuring out the difference between a straight flush and four aces.

At the same time players have become better acquainted with each other and have found out which members of the squad are susceptible to a "touch." This last is a very important matter in Spring training, especially when the club of a second looks upon the applicants for a little spending money with a cold and clammy eye.

A minstrel show, which blew into town last night, put the Pilgrims' mule "Quartette" out of business. McTigue, Maranville and Smith were just beginning to tune up when the show which was connected with the minstrel show opened in front of the hotel and started a concert, by acting as a sort of ballyhoo for the show that was to take place in the theatre across the street.

This band had but little on the German street band that make nights hideous around the streets of Boston, and it effectually spoiled the disciples of Orpheus in room 323. As admission to the minstrel show cost real money (the management having failed to extend the courtesies to the players) the squad passed it up.

Myers Playing Fast Game.

Hap Myers is beginning to make the sharps sit up and take notice. His work in practice led Captain Bill Sweeney to remark: "Stallings will make a mistake if he lets that fellow go without giving him a chance to make good. He looks mighty good to me." Hap's arm is surprising even himself. While the ball he throws is far from being a rifle bullet in the matter of speed, he manages to cut it across the diamond in good shape. Hap says his batting will be much better when the warm weather sets in.

Bud Sharpe, the former Newark, Pittsburgh, Boston, Buffalo and Oakland first baseman, who is now manager of Stallings' plantation at Haddock, Ga., is making a little tour of the Southern training camps in the interest of the Boston club, with an eye peeled for likely looking talent under reserve to the other big league clubs. He is particularly on the look-out for some speedy outfielders, players that the Boston club sorely need. He is now in Augusta, where the Brooklyn club is training.

If there is any chance of landing any outfielders, Stallings will take it. That department of his club is worrying him more than anything else. Of course, no one can tell how his pitching staff will turn out, but he has promising material. As for the catching department, there is no need to worry. The club has two grand men in Whaling and Drummond Brown, to say nothing of Harden, Devyer, who has nothing against him but his size. Mitchell and Gonzales, the Cuban.

The infield is not to be sneezed at with three good candidates for first base, Bill Sweeney at second, Rose or Maranville at short and Devlin or McKechnie at third. So when all is said and done it is the outfield that is causing the anxiety to Manager Stallings.

Titus is yet a grand fielder and one of the best men in the league to send to the bat. His weakness is his lone running. Seymour at centre is still a question. The veteran is trying hard to come back. Can he come back? The future will decide. Kirke, as patron of the South End grounds knows, is far from being a finished fielder. His batting is his strongest point. The club has only Titus, Seymour and Kirke to draw from at present. This is not a first-class outfield as every ball "fan" knows.

If Hap Myers does all that is asked at first base, Stallings could do worse than try "Mizzy" Calhoun in the outfield. Calhoun is as speedy as a sprinter. He is left-handed, but does not disqualify him as an outfielder. Ty Cobb and Spenkcer are left-handers. Calhoun takes a good, healthy swing at the ball, hit or miss, at the plate being a good deal like Cobb's.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT IN THE PILGRIM CAMP.

"Rabbit" Maranville, the diminutive shortstop and "Big" Bill James, the Lanky Pitcher of the Boston National Squad.

HARVARD DECIDES TO MAKE HOCKEY A MAJOR SPORT

Hockey is now a major sport at Harvard. The motion to make the ice game one of the main sports at Cambridge was put through last evening at the monthly meeting of the Harvard athletic committee. Henceforth the men who make the hockey team are to be given their "varsity "H," like the athletes who compete in football, track, crew and baseball.

The new "H" which has been designed for the benefit of the hockey team, will be something new at Harvard. The official insignia will be a crimson "H," edged with white, on a black sweater. The award of the insignia will not be retroactive, but will begin with the members of the team this year. The members of the hockey team will from now on be eligible to membership in the Harvard Varsity Club.

TINGLEY MAY REFEREE.

The Melrose High school hockey team management has asked that Dr. George W. Tingley be appointed referee of the Melrose High vs. Arlington High game, which is to decide the championship of the State.

SMITH OUT FOR McCARTY BOUT AFTER WELLS K. O.

NEW YORK, March 15.—"Gunboat" Smith, the California heavyweight who knocked out Bombardier Wells, the heavyweight champion of Great Britain in Madison Square Garden last night, today demanded a bout with Luther McCarty for the white heavyweight championship of the world. Smith is confident that he would be able to humble the former cowboy and declares that if the latter refuses to meet him he will claim the championship.

"There is a chance that these two men will be matched to clash in a ten-round bout in this city. If McCarty-Wells bout would be a great drawing card, as both men have good reputations and would be sure to give a fine account of themselves.

In discussing his plans for the future, Smith said today:

I am now ready to meet any heavyweight boxer in the world, Luther McCarthy included. I am out to win the championship and will not sidestep any of the leading men in my class.

I am as strong and can hit as hard as any of them, as I proved when I won from Wells one night. If McCarty refuses to give me a bout I will claim the white heavyweight championship of the world by default and will be willing to defend my laurels against any man in the ring.

Smith defeated Wells last night in Madison Square Garden in one of the most sensational bouts ever witnessed in this city. Smith scored a knockout punch after one minute and seventeen seconds of fighting in the second round.

Three times Smith beat Wells to the mat in the second round. Each time the Englishman took the count of nine, but the third time that he dropped he was unable to get up in time and had to be carried to his corner by Referee Billy John and his seconds.

A terrific right swing to the jaw gave Smith claim to the English title. The punch knocked Wells flat on his face and he was unable to move.

After he had dropped Wells for the third time Smith gave his prostrated adversary one glance; then, without waiting to see whether the referee counted the fatal ten seconds, leaped over the ropes and rushed toward his dressing room.

While Smith was hurrying away toward his quarters the referee began to count. Bending down close to Wells, John realized that he was deep in the arms of Morpheus, and he took Wells in his arms and carried him to the corner, with the assistance of Wells' seconds.

Wells was unable to sit in his chair. Restoratives were applied and he soon recovered his senses.

It was a short battle, but a great one. It was crowded with action from the first until the last. It was a battle of the young Titans of the valley, and the Wallop proved the master.

Four knockdowns were scored, one in favor of Wells in the first chapter and three in Gunboat's favor in the second. The first knockdown was not clean-cut. Smith was off his balance and Wells sent him to the floor with a left hook to the jaw. Smith was up instantly, however.

Smith weighed 182½ pounds and Wells 190½ pounds, ringside.

In the semi-final George Hodell, the African heavyweight, bested Tim Logan of Philadelphia in a ten-round bout that went the limit.

Skyscraper Baseball on Roof Is Latest Idea in Chicago

CHICAGO, March 15.—Skyscraper baseball, played 200 feet above the street level, is the newest sport adopted by employes in the main building of the Chicago Telephone Company since the mild weather has made outdoor playing possible.

A baseball diamond has been laid out on the roof of the new building and two teams organized. Every day during the noon hour the teams play a few innings.

The diamond is inclosed by a six-foot wall, and the roof is so large that no one has yet been able to bat the indoor ball, which is used, out of the "grounds."

Harvard Football Men to Commence Practice March 31

At a meeting of football men at the Harvard Varsity Club last evening, over fifty men were present. Coach Haughton did not put in an appearance and there was no sign of any solution to the coaching problem. Captain "Bob" Storer was the only coach. He announced also Spring football work, starting on Monday, March 31, and lasting two weeks, up to the time of the Spring recess in April.

He said that the same work would be for the ends, backs and centers, and that special effort would be made to develop a quarter-back this Spring.

MUNICE AND MEYERS BATTLE TO DRAW

LOWELL, March 15.—Johnny Munice and Henry Meyers of Charlestown fought a ten-round draw here at the Lowell A. C. in the seventh round Munice had Meyers at his mercy. After this round the bout became even that a draw was declared. Johnny Boyle of Lowell beat Roddy Macdonald of New Brunswick in eight rounds. Young Cooney of Lowell was awarded the decision over Young Sullivan of Lowell, and Larry Ramsdell of Lawrence defeated Tommy O'Brien of Charlestown.

MATTY BALDWIN IN TWO GOTHAM BOUTS

NEW YORK, March 15.—Matty Baldwin the Boston lightweight, will appear in two bouts here shortly. On next Thursday night he will box ten rounds with Eddie Smith, the New York lightweight, at Brown's Gym, while on Wednesday, March 26 he will meet Harry Donahue of Pekin, Ill., in a ten round bout at the Forty-fourth street A. C.

ROSE IS BEATEN.

Felton won from Rose, 50 points to 34, last night in the three-cushion billiard tournament at the White Bear. Felton's high run was 6, Rose's 3.

DARTMOUTH MEN START WORK ON OUTDOOR TRACK

HANOVER, N. H., March 15.—Coach Harry Hillman has now started the work of the Dartmouth track men in earnest. All the candidates are out now for the daily practice, and within a week the men for the training table will be picked.

The team will be fully as strong as last year, only two men having been lost, both weight men.—Captain Tilly died last Summer, while Marden was lost by graduation. From last year's freshmen team many valuable men have been added. They are "Bud" Whitney in the shot put, Braun in the hurdles, Granger in the half mile, and Read and Llewellyn in the sprints, who are all sophomores and who can be counted on as point winners. Olson, the star sprinter of the team, is running in midseason form.

Englehorn, the all-America tackle, is the best man in the hammer throw and the discus, and he should easily place in all the meets this season.

Jay Cattanach chief strength this season will be in the field events and the distance runs. Kendrick and Mason are both doing within two inches of six feet in the high jump, and by the time of the meets they should be clearing the bar at the coveted six foot mark.

HERE'S READY MONEY
FOR YOU

An easy chance to earn real money and be the guest of the AMERICAN at a performance of "Ready Money" at the Shubert Theatre.

The AMERICAN Offers Cash and Other Prizes in this Interesting Contest

DO WOMEN LOVE MONEY MORE THAN DO MEN?

THAT'S THE QUESTION
—CAN YOU ANSWER IT?

Frankly, this contest is suggested by the very amusing situations in "Ready Money" as the Shubert Theatre. In this play Stephen Baird is much pursued by the woman when he is supposed to have plenty of money, and is emphatically tabooed by a dashing mother with a marriageable daughter when she finds he is poor.

In order to obtain the opinion of AMERICAN readers on this question, the following prizes are offered for the best essay on the subject:

PRIZES

First Prize—$10.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Second Prize—$8.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Third Prize—$5.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Fourth Prize—$3.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Fifth Prize—$2.00
And two seats to "Ready Money."

Sixth to Fifteenth Prizes
Two seats to each winner to "Ready Money."

CONDITIONS

1.—The essay must not contain more than 250 words.

HOLLISTON HIGH MEETS REVERE IN TITLE GAME

The Revere High School Basketball team will play Holliston High at Revere tonight in a game which promises to be one of the best of the season. As Revere finished second to Winthrop in the Interscholastic series, the game should help deciding whether or not Holliston's claim to the championship will remain good. Should Holliston lose, it will be eliminated from further competition for the title.

Another game of unusual interest will be played between the haives. The Revere High 1911 team, which did much to bring Revere to the front in athletics, meets the Reading alumni team. This game will settle a long standing dispute.

CAMBRIDGE-OXFORD TRACK MEET TIE

LONDON, March 15.—Oxford and Cambridge Universities tied with five events each in their fiftieth annual athletic sports meeting held at Queen's club, London. Oxford won the weight putting, the hammer throwing, the high jump, the mile flat and the three-mile flat races, while Cambridge carried off the 100-yard flat, the quarter-mile flat, the half-mile flat and the 120-yard hurdle races, as well as the broad jump.

ARLINGTON IS LUCKY TO DEFEAT RINDGE

The Arlington High School hockey team was very fortunate in its game with the Rindge Technical School yesterday afternoon, which was won by Arlington by the score of 1 to 0. The teams fought on very even terms, and only a good break in the luck gave Arlington High the only score of the contest.

Speaker Hurt; Out of Sox Game

Wood Battered by Yannigans

By L. R. MURDOCH

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 15.—Tris Speaker is out of the game. "Spoke" is the second man hurt since the Red Sox came to Hot Springs. He strained the ligaments of his ankle just as his traveling companion, Joe Wood, injured his leg a week ago. Speaker's right leg is off today, just as Wood's left shank was early this week. The Sox star appeared in uniform at Majestic Park Park today, but he was limping and suffered pain when he threw his bulky Texan frame on the lame propeller.

Speaker suffered his injury trying to teach "Duffy" Lewis how to slide. "Spoke" is one of the cleverest "fall-away" boys in baseball, while his outfield side-partner, Lewis, is one of the clumsiest in the big leagues. Lewis frankly admits that he does not know how, but he is ambitious to learn, so Jake Stahl assigned Speaker to teach him.

STAHL ORDERS A SLIDING PIT.

After executing a few sample slides into second base, while Lewis followed the Texan, Speaker caught his right leg under him in the fall. It doubled up and both knee and ankle were injured. He had to quit play forthwith.

The accident led Jake Stahl immediately to order the construction of a sliding pit. Today the Sox were possessed of a section of soft ground in which they will practice from now on, trying to develop the speaker "fall-away."

While this incident happened on the base lines, Steve Yerkes distinguished himself at bat, by propelling the longest hit thus far made by the world's champions. Yerkes caught one of Ainsworth's curves where it was most amenable to the poke of the war club and the ball went away over the left field fence. When you are informed that the left field barrier at Majestic Park is somewhat more remote than the same place at Fenway Park, you will understand the value of that clout.

Yannigans Hit Wood Hard.

The Fenway Park fence is much higher but Yerkes' drive went far enough in the air to have cleared even that obstacle. It looked as if Steve's hit was fully as long as the one that gave Hugh Bradley a bit of temporary fame in Boston last Summer, when the ex-Sox hoisted the ball far over the score board and into the lots out yonder, to the consternation and eventual defeat of Cousie Mack's ex-world's champions.

Those young men, who for want of a better name are called the Yannigans, have given Joe Wood his. They fell up on Mr. Wood on his first appearance as a pitcher this year. They awaited "Smoky Joe" far and wide, counting up five hits in the first inning that he undertook to act as a server of the base ball. Of course Wood did not give the Yannigans what he is accustomed to hand to his regular opponents during the season, but neither did Hugh Bedient, and the Yannigans made but one bit off Hugh in three innings that he pitched.

However, the Regulars won, 10 to 4, and the four runs made off those five hits in that one stormy session that Joe Wood was the victim of were all that the youngsters acquired.

After that fusillade, Wood pitched three innings of classy baseball before Bedient gave a similar exhibition of gilt-edged pitching. On the other side, pitching for the Yannigans, Hall and O'Brien had their baptism of fire for this season.

Regulars Hit Ball Hard.

The Regulars got out their war clubs and gave them something to remember. Fourteen hits off the "Mad Mexican" and the Brockton moist ball boy netted ten runs for the Regular world's champions and in this game they testified their claim to the title of cities, besides winning a box of cigars, which is the daily stake in this inter-team series.

We have to give Mr. "Buck" O'Brien credit for one little thing. He hit his colleague, Mr. Joe Wood, for a two-bagger. As far back as we can remember, and we can remember some far back, we do not recall of an instance when the Brockton citizen ever hit that horsehider for as many as two bases. We like Buck O'Brien and would boost him at every spot and place. But plain, every-day candor compels us to disappoint Mr. "Buck" O'Brien's numerous friends in Brockton and thereabouts who probably expect us to drop daily encomiums upon the head of the hero of the famous bulk by saying that Mr. "Buck" O'Brien is no batter.

Remember once upon a time when we played baseball ourselves, but, although never having been able do get our name in the sporting page headlines, even in so small a place as Canastota, N. Y., where the painting of Hen Salsify's barn, is an event worth chronicling, and although just now being quite adipose and bereft of wind, we are willing to vouchsafe a slight wager that we could bat better today than Mr. "Buck" O'Brien. "Buck" handles his bat as if it were gummy and he didn't want to soil his hands.

"Buck" Hates to Hurt Ball.

He seems to be afraid of hurting somebody. He likes to pitch with a nice smooth baseball, and when he comes in bat he always impresses you with the belief that he is afraid of wrinkling the ball so that he won't be able to pitch it correctly when he returns to the box. Therefore, "Buck" O'Brien's two-base hit becomes memorable. Also it is a tribute to the Hot Springs climate.

Besides this event in the life of Mr. "Buck" O'Brien it is necessary to state that Forrest Cary made a three-bagger off Joe Wood. Carleton and Yerkes also hit the ball for three bases. Gardner played his name in the summary for a two-base hit. Also he leaped ahead of Tris Speaker, his batting rival, by hitting safely three times in four efforts. Speaker was out of the game because of his injury.

Stahl gave Henriksen the star's place in the centre garden for the Regulars and took the opportunity to give Walsh, his outfield recruit, his first opportunity to play ball with the Red Sox. It was rather tough on Walsh, as he had been in Hot Springs but three hours, after a fifty-four hours' ride from Boston.

Before dropping the subject of batting we are required, for fear of being accused of concealing the facts, to admit that Jake Stahl struck out twice. Jake was the "mark" on this occasion and "Buck" O'Brien and Charley Hall both took occasion to convince their boss that they had something worth paying a salary for.

Ray Collins Joins Team.

Ray Collins is back at work, and it looks good to see the southpaw slinging them around the ball park. Collins does not look so huge as the Red Sox expected. He is in better form than he was when he reported here last Spring. Stahl intends to keep him active on the sidelines every day he is here. He weighs five pounds less than he did at this time last year.

Schoolboy Athletes in Big Meet

Record List of Stars to Compete

The high school indoor track season will come to a close this afternoon when the athletes from ten Boston high schools meet in the fifth annual Regimental games of the Boston High School Track and Field League this afternoon at the Irvington Street Armory.

The biggest entry list in the history of the meet has been received, and it is expected that close to 700 youths will battle for the premier laurels.

It is hard to pick the winner of the games, but three high schools have equal chances of winning the championship. English High, High School of Commerce and Dorchester High all have evenly balanced teams, and are set for high honors.

English High has a total of thirteen points already to its credit, winning that number in the shot-put events held Thursday. Commerce won eleven points in this event, Boston Latin five, Dorchester three and East Boston High two.

Commerce Won Last Year.

The High School of Commerce team won the title last year, beating out English, which won the event the three previous years. English is out to win back its honors this season, and Captain Irving Howe has a well-balanced team in the meet. The English seniors will capture many points, and if the intermediates and juniors come through as expected English should win.

Dorchester High has a well-balanced team of seniors, but the merits of the two lowest divisions are unknown. Commerce has some good seniors and a strong team of intermediates, as was the case last season.

Great interest is manifested in the outcome of the senior events. Many star performers are entered in each contest, and all the races should be close. English High is banking on winning first place in the sixty-yard dash with Captain Howe as the chief entry. Howe will have a hard field to compete against in Eddie Baffe of Dorchester, Jack Saladino of Boston Latin and Captain Elmer Smith of the High School of Commerce. This race will attract considerable interest as the runners are evenly matched.

Captain Elmer Smith will be the hope of the Commerce boys in the 300-yard run, and he is the favorite to win. Smith has been doing good time throughout the season at this distance, and he has an edge on the other youngsters in the race.

Dorchester High is expected to score in the 600-yard run. Chester Breit is the favorite. Breit will have to perform at his very best, for he will have a good field pitted against him. Colvin of Commerce is a dangerous man in this event.

Dempsey Favorite in Mile.

Dorchester is also expected to pull down a first place in the mile run with Dempsey entered. Dempsey has been running the mile in fine time during the indoor season, and he outclasses any of the boys from the other schools.

Commerce relies on Alfred Beck in the 1,000-yard run. Lewis of English is picked to win in the hurdles, and Bill Davis of Commerce is the favorite in the running high jump.

The events for the intermediate and junior athletes will also be watched with interest for their points go toward the grand total, and the victories of these boys will undoubtedly decide the meet.

HARVARD AND YALE CLASS CREWS PLAN FOR A BIG RACE

The Harvard Athletic Committee has ratified the rowing innovation at Harvard of having a race between the champion class crews of Harvard and Yale during the coming Spring. This race, the first of its kind ever to be held, will be rowed on the Charles River on May 17, the day of the race between Harvard, Princeton and Pennsylvania.

Ostergren of Roxbury, 1b.; Charles Saunders, 2b.; Joseph Murray, s.s.; Patrick Cawley, captain, 3b.; James E. O'Brien, Boston, l.f.; Thomas J. Long, c.f. One of the battery men will work in right field.

K.O. BROWN MUST BEAT ANDERSON OR QUIT RING

By H. M. WALKER.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 15.—In the natural course of events Kayo Brown will know inside the next few hours whether he is to continue as a high-class ring "card" or return East and live on his investments.

The New York lightweight is scheduled to box twenty rounds with the latest California favorite, Young Bud Anderson, in the Vernon ring of the Pacific A. C. this afternoon.

A defeat for Brown will mean that his name will be scratched off the "live" list of every promoter in the country. Victory will bring him a return date against Mexican Joe Rivers.

Rivers already has contracted to go East and box Leach Cross. He signalized that Brown should meet and beat Anderson before asking for a second bout. Brown agreed and the papers for today's battle were quickly drawn up.

In Anderson Brown meets a clever boxer, one with a jarring jolt in each hand.

A reward hangs over Anderson's head. Should he win, the rich July 4 date has been promised him with Rivers or Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie. Anderson wound up his training work Thursday, but Brown worked right up till today. Brown is in great condition and is so strong that he will not suffer from the extra work.

Anderson is favorite over Brown in the betting at odds of 10 to 8. The arrival of Dan Morgan, Brown's manager, livened up betting, and the men possibly will enter the ring at evens.

ROTTEN EGG MEN AT WORK DAY AND NIGHT TO COVER UP TRACKS

Mr. Cassidy today tells of an amusing incident he witnessed in the rotten egg district. The rotten egg dealers are working night and day to cover their tracks, and to remove all possible future sources of trouble. One of them came to Mr. Cassidy with a hint or two. Each is accusing the other of having betrayed the business and of having caused the ruin of their rotten egg traffic.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

These be parlous days in the Rots and Spots Club.

I have introduced you to the members of this club—the men who have been selling two tons of rotten eggs daily to certain Boston bakers.

The exposure of the workings of this secret little club has stirred up a regular war inside the club's limits. The members are ready to fly at each others' throats at a word.

The other day I was on my way to see a man in the rotten egg business, and was passing through the market district when I heard a shout and saw men and boys running off to my left. I followed them, out of curiosity. It was worth it.

The crowd was gathered around the entrance to an egg dealer's establishment. The windows on the third floor were open and from within came the sound of strife and tumult. A woman was half out of the window, screaming:

"Murder, murder! They've brought a gang of men here to murder me.",

I waited to get inside, and got across the street and up on a wagon, but I couldn't see into the window. I heard a man yell:

"You ruined my business. You did. You'd do anything.'

Then another voice piped up:

"I didn't feed the people of Massachusetts for fourteen years on rotten eggs!"

Tumbled Into Street.

The crowd was yelling and a policeman or two appeared.

Just then three men tumbled down the stairs and out into the street, fairly spitting on each other's heels. Two of them went off down the street, but the other, a little fellow with big glasses on and pale as a sheet, ducked into the store on the ground floor out of sight.

It was lucky, for a moment later came two others, a burly, dark-haired man, and the woman who had been screaming from the window. They ran wildly about for a moment, the woman yelling:

"They brought a gang here to murder me!"

Just then the little fellow who had slipped into the shop plucked up courage to come out. He cried to the crowd:

"This man here says I killed his business. He says he's been fourteen years in the rotten egg business, and that I killed it. If I did, I'm proud of it."

I didn't recognize either of the two. They were neither of them among the rotten egg men I know by sight. If one had been in the rotten egg business for fourteen years he must have dropped in lately. They quarreled for a moment together, then the man and woman were hurt again, and the little fellow hung around for a while, while the crowd scattered.

I started to leave, when I saw the little man go up to a policeman on the corner. He spoke to the policeman, and the two of them came back and went upstairs. They came back in a moment and I saw that they had gone after the little man's overcoat. I suppose he didn't want to face the outraged pair unguarded. He was wise!

Oh yes, the Rots and Spots Club is all stirred up. One of the members has been commissioned by the others to smooth out difficulties, and "do things up" with any egg dealers that are apt to make trouble.

"Fixed" by Rotten Egg Men.

As I told you yesterday, the rotten egg men declare they have "fixed" things, so that the bill will not pass.

On one side, there are the rotten egg men allied. On the other, the people of Boston and of the State, who are demanding that laws be enacted which will give them real protection from the traffic in rotten eggs.

The two will come together next Monday, when the rotten egg bill is sure of a hearing before the Committee on Public Health.

The bill is expected to be considered in connection with another, which was introduced by Mayor Fitzgerald and which has to do with the question of licensing men now engaged in offensive trades.

Alton L. Briggs, executive secretary of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, has shown an interest in these two bills, and is expected to be one of those who oppose them.

Be glad those who oppose these two bills, especially the one which will abolish the rotten egg traffic.

This last bill was introduced by Representative John F. McCarthy, and in view of the exposures printed in the AMERICAN I believe it is one of the most important pure food bills before the present Legislature.

Pure Food for All.

A hearing on the bills was scheduled for Thursday, but was postponed by consent. Another bill had drawn a reward of a hundred cases of more from Springfield, and it was decided to give them the opportunity to be heard, without forcing them to make another trip from the middle of the State.

Many interested in the egg bill were disappointed, till the circumstances were explained.

District Attorney Pelletier and Inspector Silas F. Waitt have secured evidence, it was stated today, that shows conclusively the existence of the traffic in rotten eggs which I have exposed. This evidence is expected to be presented to the next Grand Jury.

I believe the rotten egg bill should pass, and I believe it is sure to do so.

Symphony Gives "Max Und Moritz" as a Novelty

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

A Symphonic Burlesque for Grand Orchestra by Mraczek, one of the modern school of German composers, had the place of honor on the Symphony program yesterday afternoon. This work is entitled "Max und Moritz," two youngsters who correspond in Germany to our friends, the Katzenjammer Kids.

It is descriptive music gone mad. Whether the composer is making fun of the modern programmists with his efforts to picture on an orchestra the two little boys climbing down a chimney, falling into a pan of dough, getting baked in an oven and eating their way out, sawing a plank in halves and falling through into a river, and finally getting ground up in a saw mill, or whether he is seriously intending to describe these things in a humorous manner, I don't know. He is probably serious.

As description this work is utter rubbish. As music it is atrocious. It is cacophounded of racket and twaddle of uproar and dinkiness. Its themes are cheap as dirt, and its only excuse for appearance upon a Symphony program is its pretentiousness. Some contest, held by some orchestra, the composer dragged in an organ and pianoforte to make a show.

Admitting that an orchestra of Theatre Organ music by Liszt, which is the second episode from Lenau's "Faust," is indeed descriptive music that is successful, for it requires little imagination to conceive of the Devil fiddling this wild, passionate, diabolical waltz.

If we question the taste of performing "Max und Moritz," we must admire the brilliancy with which the thing was played. And the loveliness of Au Strugs, and especially the fine qualities of the violincellos was never more evident than in the Charpentier number.

Harvard Freshman, "Electrocuted" by Frat, Quite Well

D. N. Gilbert, a Harvard freshman from Lowell, Pa., has been "electrocuted" and is alive today. The explanation is this. The "electrocution" was part of a fraternity initiation. This society, appearing in the Harvard Crimson, created a stir:

' All men, who have been previously notified, report for electrocution of D. N. Gilbert at 9 p. m. Friday evening.

The alarm over Gilbert's life was dispelled when, today he appeared alive and well wearing the sign of the fraternity and a happy smile on his face.

FIND CHLORAL CAUSED ADMIRAL'S DEATH

ly believed—shows that Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, U. S. N., retired, did not come to his death in a wholly "natural" manner.

Developments in Case.

The report today that some immediate action would be taken by the authorities —possibly an arrest in the case—followed three developments in the death mystery:

A secret conference in Rockland of District Attorney Barker and Judge George Kelley, counsel for Mrs. Eaton.

A rumored trip in an auto early today of State Detective Scott and Deputy Sheriff Condon from Brockton, where they visited a drug store, through Rockland, to the direction of West Norwell—presumably bound for Assinippi.

A report that Professor Whitney of Harvard had found traces of poison in the rear admiral's stomach and had so informed District Attorney Barker. It was believed that Judge Kelley was told of Professor Whitney's finding, whatever it was.

The fact that the United States authorities are taking a hand in this case, Dr. Paul P. Dessez of the Charlestown Navy Yard has asked Medical Examiner Osgood for particulars in the case. The naval official told the medical examiner the Federal government was ready to do its part in the case at any time and that the findings will be submitted to Washington.

The likelihood that District Attorney Barker will interview Mrs. June Ainsworth Keyes of Dorchester, stepdaughter of the rear admiral, to learn what she may know of the mystery victim's life and habits. Asked if he would not consult Mrs. Keyes from the case by saying that he did not intend to question her, Mr. Barker replied.

"I will not say that I am not going to. This is a serious case."

It is known that Mrs. Jessie May Harrison Eaton, the rear admiral's widow, is anxious to have the authorities drop the case. She declares that the officials are prepared to take some definite action, they have no right to persecute her.

This declaration from the widow, who is ill at her home in Assinippi, followed frank statements from her daughter by her first marriage, in which they give their views of the rear admiral's character and life. The statements of the dead man's stepdaughters are strangely contrasting, their points of view of the mystery victim were diametrically opposite.

Mrs. Keyes Accuses Eaton.

Miss Dorothy V. Ainsworth Eaton, the Rear Admiral's favorite stepdaughter, defended the dead man. She told of the love for him, referred to him as "daddy" and said his death had brought great sorrow into the family. She declared the Navy Yard had promised a Navy funeral for the funeral, but had failed to keep its promise.

Mrs. June Ainsworth Keyes, bride of Ralph Preble Keyes of Somerville and the Rear Admiral's other stepdaughter, declined to see another man making charges against her rear admiral stepfather. She said her mother was right in accusing

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX SAYS:

Retain Youth by Keeping Heart and Mind Full of Human Sympathy

WE TWO—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

We two make home of any place we go;
We two find joy in any kind of weather;
Or if the earth is clothed in bloom or snow,
If Summer days invite, or bleak winds blow,
What matters it if we two are together?
We two, we two, we make our world, our weather.

We two make banquets of the plainest fare;
In every cup we find the thrill of pleasure.
We hide with wreaths the furrowed brow of care,
And win to smiles the set lips of despair.
For us life always moves with lilting measure;
We two, we two, we make our world, our pleasure.

We two find youth renewed with every dawn;
Each day holds something of an unknown glory.
We waste no thought on grief or pleasure gone;
Tricked out like hope, time leads us on and on,
And thrums upon his harp new song or story,
We two, we two, we find the paths of glory.

We two make heaven here on this little earth;
We do not need to wait for realms eternal.
We know the use of tears, know sorrow's worth,
And pain for us is always love's rebirth.
Our paths lead closely by the paths supernal;
We two, we two, we live in love eternal.

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.)

VERY young married woman ought to cast a thoughtful glance along the future and make some provisions for middle age.

Not provisions for a rainy day, but preparations which will insure a sunny season when middle life arrives.

At twenty-five, forty seems far away; but that age speeds toward us with the velocity of a flying express train.

It is a beautiful age, when we meet it with the right understanding of all it may mean, and with the right preparation.

Culture, accomplishments, a perfectly developed body, a well-trained mind, an enlightened spirit, a sympathetic heart, an uplifted soul, all these mean a lovely middle and old age.

And all these things must, to reach their best development, be begun in the earlier season of life.

Between the ages of thirty-five and fifty-five the life of the average woman becomes either gray or gay.

In the world of fashion the "gay matron is to be found. She lends in her circle, she invents new amusements, she delights in being called "dangerous," and she practices all the arts of coquetry upon the men she meets, especially men younger than herself.

Life is a feverish dream to her, and she is never happy save when in the midst of social excitement.

Her Indiscretions.

Not infrequently she brings a scandal upon her name through indiscretions of conduct, and she figures more frequently in the divorce court than do younger women.

In the quieter walks of life the women who reach thirty-five begin to find the world assuming a gray color. All the gold and crimson fades; the ambitions of early youth are lost, with many of its illusions; romance has faded and duty only remains. They perform the tasks required of them as wives and mothers in a mechanical manner, and become "settled" in figure and mould in face and prematurely old in appearance.

Yet at thirty-five a woman is entering the very best period of her whole life.

From then until fifty at least she should be in possession of her most ripened mental powers, and she should be most pleasing to the eye, like a radiant Autumn landscape.

Life should be a thing of delight to her, and she ought to enjoy it with more intensity than ever before because of her deeper understanding and broader sympathies and clearer judgment.

Nature to understand how the society It is not difficult for a student of human woman of middle age becomes "gay." Woman's emotional nature is at its height at thirty-five and forty, and she craves love more than in her shy and unformed youth. Dame Fashion incites her votaries to folly and shuts her eyes to indiscretions so long as they are not flagrant. If marriage has proven a disappointment to the society woman she easily plunges into the vortex of fashionable dissipation and finds her only enjoyment in its whirlpool of folly.

The very craving for sentiment in the heart of the mature woman in the village or country town is what makes life assume a gray color for her. She is ashamed of her own weakness and puts away the thoughts which assail her as evidences of a morbid mind. She tells herself that she is no longer young, that she has outlived her romantic period, and that she must be satisfied to accept the dull old age which lies before her. So she meets it halfway upon the road to show she does not care.

The husband of such a woman does not dream what is going on in her mind and soul. He has become a money maniac or is absorbed in politics. If his home is well ordered, his wife and children comfortable, it is as far as his ambitions lead him.

The Husband's Attitude

He regards sentiment as a thing of the past, and it never occurs to him to pay his wife a compliment or speak a word of love to her.

That would savor of weakness to his mind.

So the gray years go by, and if one day he notices that his wife looks very old and commonplace he feels a sense of personal injury in the fact, and wonders why some women lose their charm so much sooner than others.

The face cannot stay young unless the heart is kept warm.

Every woman who passes thirty ought to keep her brain, heart and mind alive and warm with human sympathy and emotion. She ought to interest herself in the lives of others and make her friendship valuable to the young.

She should keep her body supple and avoid losing the lines of grace, and she should select some study or work to occupy spare hours and to lend a zest to the coming years. Every woman in the comfortable walks of life can find time for such a study. No woman of tact, charm, refinement and feeling need ever let her husband, unless she has married a clod, become indifferent or commonplace in his treatment of her. Man reflects to an astonishing degree women's sentiments for him.

Keep Sentiment Alive

Keep sentiment alive in your own heart, madam, and in the heart of your husband. If he sees that other men admire you he will be more alert to the necessity of remaining your lover.

Take the happy, safe, medium path between a gray and a gay life by keeping it radiant and bright. Read and think and talk of cheerful, hopeful, interesting subjects. Avoid small gossip, and be careful in your criticism of neighbors. Sometimes we must criticise, but speak to people whose faults you feel a word of counsel may amend—not of them to others.

Make your life after it reaches its noon glorious with sunlight, rich with harvests and bright with color. Be alive in mind, heart and body. Be joyous without giddiness, loving without silliness, attractive without being flirtatious, attentive to others' needs without being officious and instructive without too great a display of erudition.

Be a noble, loving, lovable woman.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WIFE, sed Pa to Ma the other nite, I am commencing to suspeck that sumthing is the matter with my stummick.

What is the matter with yure stummick, dearest luv? sed Ma. Does it rebuke you?

No, sed Pa.

Well, sed Ma, does it chide you a little?

No, sed Pa, that is the worst part of it. You see, wife, if it wud only git rite up & give me a good rebuking or a good chiding I wuddent mind it so much, because it has certingly been a grand old stummick & I can say with all my hart that I am much obliged to it. But instead of it getting upon its hind legs, Pa sed, it jests looks at me kind of reeproach-ful like, as much as to say Llasen, old pol, what will becom of me if you shud happen to take a final flop? That is why I feel kind of kind toward my stummick, sed Pa, and I was jest wondering if there wuddent be sumway that I cud proteck it in its old age. In youth it proteck-ted me, Pa sed, & I ought to be jest as good a follow as it was to me, like the man which sed

Woodsman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough.
In youth it sheltered me
& I'll protect it now.

You seem to be particularly fond of yure stummick tonite, sed Ma. What is the particular reason for it?

I was thinking that sum bitters mite do me good, sed Pa. So I brought sum hoam.

Oh, sed Ma, you did, did you?

Yes, sed Pa. Ever since the day I told you I was going to quit drinking tea, coffee or milk, & maybe a little water, you first got up in the morning, I have kep my word religious like, no matter how often I have felt like going & having just one.

It is pritty hard sumtimes, sed Pa, wen you meet sum old pal from Arizona or California, ware they never seem to think about swearing off, to say No, thank you. In fack, Pa sed, I never knew until lately how bitter them three words was, No, Thank You, & the worst of it is, sed Pa, the other feller never says Yure Welcome. Let me look at them bitters, sed Ma.

By all means, sed Pa. The druggist sed that I cud let my wife look at them. They are like all other bitters, Pa sed, kind of dark brown, like the taste in a hero's mouth.

Then Ma looked at the bitters & then she smelled of them.

It seems to me, sed Pa, that you are smelling kind of hard.

If I was smelling half as hard of yure bitters as the bitters smells themselfs, sed Ma, I wud be sniffing sum. But I will tak a taste of them anyway & see if they are fit for yure stummick. Then Ma took two swallows of the bitters & Pa after while I took a swallow too. Then Ma went to the piano & beegun to sing If I had a Thousand Lives to Live I Wud Give Them All For One, & I forgit what I sang.

I never knew bitters was so sweet.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

The Widow Insists on Seeing Maynard, and Is Greatly Shocked at the Sight of His Injuries

AFTER she had announced to Beatrice that the rescuer of the Miller children from the burning house had been Paul Maynard, Helen Robbins waited for some further comment from her friend. If she had counted upon a sensation following upon her disclosure, she was disappointed. Beatrice sat motionless. Except for her irrepressible exclamation of grief or consternation, she uttered no sound. Mutely she gazed out of the window at the lawn where the fireflies were appearing in the soft September dusk.

At last Helen's patience reached an end, and she spoke.

"I hope I haven't shocked you, my dear," she said, with the least note of acrasin in her voice. "But you insisted on knowing. Perhaps, I should not have told you."

"You were perfectly right," Beatrice assured her in a dull, emotionless voice. "I brought the knowledge upon myself. I insisted upon your telling me." She paused. "What I dreaded is true," she muttered.

Her friend did not catch the last sentence. "What did you say?" she asked.

Beatrice Is Hysterical

"Nothing," answered the widow. Silence fell again on the dusk-filled room. The hostess endured it as long as she could, then sprung to her feet.

"I can't stand this!" she exclaimed, with a pretence of gaiety, going across to the mantel shelf for matches. "I'll be going the blues myself if we sit like a couple of owls here in the dark much longer. There!" as she lighted the lamp on the table, "that looks a little more cheerful!"

"It is better," responded Beatrice absently, her eyes still fixed on the dark rectangle of the window.

"What is the matter, dear?" queried Helen. "You look wretched. Are you tired? Would you like me to help you into bed?"

With a stifled moan the widow buried her face in her hands and burst into tears.

"Oh!" she sobbed. "I want to go home! I want to go away from this dreadful country and never come back!"

So violent was her weeping that Helen, after two or three vain attempts to soothe her, ran out into the hall, thereby almost colliding with Dr. Yeager, who was on his way to the floor above.

"Where is Dr. Haynes?" queried Helen, breathlessly.

"He has driven down to the village for the mail," answered the physician. "Is there anything I can do?"

"Oh!" exclaimed Helen. "Beatrice is having hysterics, I think. Can't you stop them?"

Without further explanation Dr. Yeager turned and entered Beatrice's room. The widow's face was still buried in her hands, and her frame was shaken with the violence of her sobs, but she was weeping more quietly, though bitterly, and showed no signs of hysteria. The physician stepped to her side and laid a kindly hand upon her shoulder.

"What is the matter, Mrs. Minor?" he asked softly.

She raised her tear-stained face, controlling herself with an effort.

"I Want to See Mr. Maynard"

"I want to see Mr. Maynard," she declared, looking her questioner straight in the eyes.

Dr. Yeager started violently—his self-possession leaving him for the moment. "You cannot see Mr. Maynard," he began, "because"—

He got no further, for the woman interrupted him. "He is lying upstairs ill—I know that!" she hurried on, "and I must see him!"

"Have you told her of his present condition?" asked the physician, turning sharply upon Mrs. Robbins.

"No!" stammered the frightened hostess, "I haven't!"

The physician took Beatrice Minor's trembling hands in his firm, cool clasp. "You are to go to bed now," he said gently, but decidedly. "You certainly cannot see Paul tonight, and we will talk about it further in the morning. I promise you that. Now go to bed!"

Shaken in mind and body, the woman made no further protest, and the doctor left the room. Silently, Helen helped her friend undress, and, after seeing her settled comfortably in bed, left her, promising to look in upon her later. But when she returned the wearied and spent creature was sleeping the sleep of utter exhaustion.

She was better the following morning and had dressed and breakfasted in her room when Dr. Haynes made his usual call. After greeting her cheerfully he spoke frankly and without delay of the subject that he knew was uppermost in her mind.

"Mrs. Robbins has told me," he said simply, "of last night's talk. I am glad you suffered no ill effects from the shock of the revelation. She and Yeager tell me you want to see Maynard. Now, Mrs. Minor, the case stands like this: It may do him good to see you, for he is light-headed from fever, and often asks for you. But it may be another shock to you to see him, for he looks different from what he did when you last saw him."

He paused, and Beatrice whispered tremulously, "How is he different?"

"Well," stammered the physician, "he he is—well—well—not exactly a pretty sight, you know."

She Sees Maynard

"But I must see him!" persisted the woman.

"If you insist, you shall," agreed the physician. "But think seriously first. Then if you decide that you wish to go upstairs I will go up with you."

"I want to see him," she repeated, dully. And the man made no further protest.

She saw him, and turned sick at the sight of the swathed face and the smell of strong drugs. She saw him, and flinched, and forgot her gratitude as she looked. She tried to speak, and failed. The parched lips tried to smile at her, and a bandaged hand was stretched toward her. Once more she tried to speak, but, instead, gave a weak little cry of fear and turned from him, catching the physician by the arm. "Take me away!" she whispered, pleadingly. And, as Dr. Haynes did her bidding, the eyes of the tortured man followed her with a strange expression in them. The look was not a pleasant one to see.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HUNT A MUTUAL FRIEND

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a girl of seventeen, who, I think, likes me very much, but we have not met many times. She always has a smile for me when we meet. Now I do not know this girl to speak to. How could I make her acquaintance? L. F. M.

BE patient, and you will some day find the friend who will introduce you. But don't think because you like a girl's smile that you love her. To claim love on such slight ground is to make sport of the world.

IT LOOKS MERCENARY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to be married, and would like to know whether it is right for a young man who is making $30 a week to ask his intended wife to continue on with her position after she is married to help get a home. This young man also has a small bank account. Is it proper for him to ask her how much money, if any, she has in the bank. PERPLEXED.

SUCH an attitude indicates that he is thinking more of her wage-earning ability than of her love. If a woman continues as a wage-earner after her marriage it should be from her choice, not from his. The money she has saved by her work and self-denial is no one's affair but her own.

Household Suggestions

Should colored clothing be stained with mud, let it dry, then brush out as much as possible, and apply a mixture of salt and flour; leave for a day or two in a dry place and then brush off.

* * *

It frequently happens that painters splash the glass windows when they are painting the sills. When this is the case melt some soda in very hot water and wash the glass with it, using a soft flannel. It will entirely remove the paint.

* * *

When meat is being roasted, and there is any danger of it becoming too brown, place a basin of water in the oven. The steam will prevent scorching, and the meat will cook better.

* * *

To "break in" a new pen-point quickly, dip it in ink and hold it in the flame of a lighted match for a second. Wipe it dry with a cloth, and it will then hold ink and write as well as a point that has been used for several days.

* * *

For scrubbing floors cold water is preferable to hot; it does not soak into the wood so readily and consequently dries sooner. The scrubbing brush must always be moved up and down the boards according to the grain of the wood, and not across it.

* * *

Before baking potatoes, let them stand in hot water for fifteen minutes. They will require only half the time for baking, are more mealy and palatable, and, if they are baked in a gas oven the saving of gas is considerable.

Direct Evidence

For several months we have been telling you what Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of and the ailments it has been curing for more than a third of a century. Below we give a letter telling particulars of one of the many cures it has effected, and we leave it for you to say how many and how strong adjectives we might truthfully use in introducing a letter of this character.

C. I. Hood Co., Lowell, Mass.

"208 Upper Front St.,
"Exeter, N. H., May 27, 1912.

"Gentlemen:—It is with the sincere purpose of benefiting others I write what Hood's Sarsaparilla did for me.

"On getting up one morning I found what seemed to be a mosquito bite on the calf of my right leg. Soon the eruption grew larger and continued day after day, becoming more and more troublesome. The physicians advised poulticing, and I soon found I had a running sore. It ate steadily into the flesh, discharged freely, and grew worse. Another physician told me to use a rubber bandage, but the sore grew worse until I

There Was Not a Spot of Healthy Skin as Large as a 10ct. Piece Between My Knee and Ankle.

My leg was now a dreadful sight. There were places large and deep enough to hold an egg. I was told the leg must be amputated. The specialist said he had seen many bad sores, but none equal to mine.

"One day a neighbor, Mrs. Buckley, spoke of the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, and I said 'I don't think such a simple thing as Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me any good.' But my husband joined in urging me to try Hood's, and so he bought a bottle. I thought I might as well take it. Before I finished that first bottle, I suffered less pain and could see the edges of the sore beginning to heal. As I kept on with the medicine, new flesh formed, the raw surface diminished, and after using ten bottles the Sore Was Completely Healed and My General Health Perfect.

I am able to work every day, weigh 175 pounds, my leg never gives me any trouble, and I use it the same as the other. I believe it my duty to tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla did for me, and I praise it to all my friends." Mrs. Josephine Sargent.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Having cured such a tenacious case of scrofulous impurity as that described above—and it has cured many other cases—is certainly to be relied upon for all troubles caused or promoted by impure or low state of the blood.

Closing Stocks; Financial News

Stock markets were dull today and prices were irregular at the close in Boston. New York was weaker at the finish, after a rise which share transactions totalled little more than 80,000. For the week sales only aggregated 1,818,000. Bond sales amounted to $9,388,000. In the local market Boston & Maine closed at 72, a gain of a fractional loss and Southern Pacific with a small gain. Most leading stocks ended lower.

A San Francisco dispatch says the California Railroad Commission has rejected the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific modified dissolution plan, stating that the traffic agreement between the Harriman roads must be an "open door" affair.

The New York bank statement reads—Average statement: Surplus reserve, $6,137,650, increase $1,264,300; loans, decrease, $16,283,000; specie, decrease, $5,148,000; legal tenders, increase, $472,600; Net deposits, decrease, $18,782,000; circulation, decrease, $33,000. Actual statement: deposits, decrease, $22,201,000; specie, decrease, $1,317,000; legal tenders, increase, $1,131,000; net deposits, decrease, $25,302,000; reserve, increase, $5,863,200.

New York Market Dull.

Dullness characterized the New York market at the opening. Most of the speculative interest was centered upon proceedings relating to dissolution of the merger of the Harriman lines. There was a great deal of uncertainty as to what course would be taken by the federal court when the modified plan come before it today.

Southern Pacific opened at 98¾, or ⅝ under Friday's closing, but within half an hour sold up to 99⅜, or ⅜ above last night's final. Union Pacific opened ¼ off, but made a partial recovery. These prices were the lowest these stocks have sold at in five years.

Other stocks were affected by the Harriman situation. Among the other declines were: Amalgamated ⅜, Atchison ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ⅛, Chino Copper ¼, Goodrich 1¼, Missouri Pacific ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅝, Steel common ⅝ and Steel preferred ⅝. Utah Copper gained ⅝ on speculative buying.

The Curb was weak.

Americans in London were steady, but Canadian Pacific advanced there.

London Market Was Quiet.

At the exchange. Traders held back from American stocks, wishing to learn what the New York bank statement would show before making commitments. The Paris bourse was quiet. Nothing new in the monetary or war situation had much influence upon prices.

Harriman Dissolution Status.

A San Francisco dispatch received in New York today says: "The Railway Commissioners of California have wired Attorney-General McReynolds and also the United States Circuit Court at St. Louis their decision in regard to the modified plan for dissolving the merger of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. It is understood that the decision is favorable to the Southern Pacific.

If the syndicate which underwrote the $125,650,000 Southern Pacific stock held by Union Pacific expires at midnight today, owing to the failure of the Circuit Court at St. Louis or the California Railroad Commission to approve the modified dissolution plan, it is expected that any new underwriting agreement will be at a lower figure for the stock.

A prominent director of the Union Pacific said:

"There has been considerable change in conditions, and, of course, any new deal would have to be made on a different basis."

It is said in Washington that the Attorney-General has not had time to study the plan and that it will be submitted to the court today without his having expressed either approval or disapproval.

According to another San Francisco dispatch, the California Railroad Commission telegraphed Mr. McReynolds that it found itself "unable to pronounce an opinion on the modified plan."

Financial News in Brief.

Holders of railway and other stocks will receive dividend checks today aggregating $7,643,549.

A sharp break in the price of commercial bar silver was attributed to world wide high money rates which forced Bombay and Hong Kong syndicates to realize part of their holdings.

Bank clearings for the week at all the leading cities in the United States aggregated $2,884,300,040, an increase of 1.8 per cent. as compared with the corresponding week last year.

Standard Oil of California reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, net earnings $7,106,136, equal to 15.5-5 per cent. on the outstanding stock. Profit and loss surplus as of December 31, 1912, $20,196,002.

President Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation has specifications out for the construction of ten new ore carrying boats which will be employed in carrying ore from the Chilean mines of the company through the Panama Canal to this country. A total of about 50,000 tons of steel will be required in their construction.

Commercial failures this week in the United States, as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., are 309, as against 257 last week, 263 the preceding week, and 279 the corresponding week last year.

The copper metal market was dull yesterday and today, according to reports. Sales effected were around 13 cents a pound.

Loglee Motor Company stockholders will meet on Wednesday to vote on a proposition to increase capital stock from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Cooks' Strike Closes Big London Restaurant.

LONDON—A restaurant strike, in a mild form as compared with New York's recent experiences, tied up business at the luncheon hour of 12 today at one of the biggest London restaurants.

At the word of command: "Down dishes," the sixty cooks ceased to work, while crowds of customers had to be turned away, amid the jeers of the striking guilefeed at the door.

Cat Put City in Darkness.

LONDON—At a meeting of the Electric Lighting Committee of the Cardiff Council the city engineer reported that the reason the city was plunged in darkness Tuesday night was that a cat found its way to the high-tension gear and walked across the cables. The cat was killed, the copper slices burned, and the connections put.

Accuse Army Officers of Graft.

BRUSSELS—A number of high officers of the Belgian Army have been accused by the military authorities, according to the newspapers, of swindling the Belgian government to the amount of from $100,000 to $600,000 by means of fraudulent contracts for the furnishing of munitions of war to the Belgian fortress artillery.

Big Army Budget for England.

LONDON—England's army and navy estimate for the fiscal year of 1913-14 issued today calls for an expenditure of $141,200,000, an increase of $1,000,000. This is in line with the enormous increase in war expenditures being made throughout Europe.

Big Welsh Mine Merger.

LONDON—Four great Welsh coal mines in which David Alfred Thomas, senior member of the firm of Thomas & Davey, has a predominating interest and whose annual output is 3,250,000 tons, will be merged shortly into a single company, with a capital of $10,000,000.

Show Notes

J. R. C. MacBeath, who has for many years been connected with the locomotive industry, has become connected with the Ford Motor Company's local selling branch.

* * *

President Lasher of the Weed Chain Tire Grip Company was a visitor to the show yesterday, and was delighted that the weather was bad as it gave him an opportunity to bring into greater prominence the practicability and safety of the Weed tire chain.

* * *

Archy Hughes of the Fore-Hughes Company, distributors of Pierce cars in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Providence, is looking over the show today and comparing the local conditions with those of his own territory. He says that Boston has nothing on any of his various branches, which are doing just as much business as his friend J. W. Maguire of this city.

* * *

Local Manager Charles E. Fay of the Ford yesterday entertained Alden Bloss, an old-timer in the industry, who has a host of friends hereabouts.

* * *

Advertising Manager George C. Hobbs of the United States Motor Company was another one who looked over the show yesterday. Mr. Hobbs has visited all the shows of any consequence that have been held in this country this season and is free to admit that the Boston exhibit is second to none in point of actual sales and excellence of decorations.

* * *

Messrs. Hollander and Clinton of the F. F. Automobile Company have been the guests of Local Manager R. R. Ross during the past week of the Boston show. They say it compares with any that has been held. Mr. Hollander is an old Bostonian by and years ago embarked in the automobile business as a result of the pleasure he derived from driving his own car.

* * *

Frank J. Rowan, formerly district sales manager of the Gabriel Snubber Company in the East, is now sales manager of the Velvet spring absorbing springs, which he is exhibiting at the show. The improved Velvet spook absorbing springs have made a decided hit with motorists and dealers who have looked over this exhibit. Mr. Rowan will close up a number of agencies before departing.

* * *

Our good old friend Harry Fosdick, one of the organizers of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, and one of the prime movers in the first show to be held in this city some time before the perfecting of the present organization, arrived in town yesterday. He brought with him good news relative to the Hupmobile Company and the great work it is doing, not only in America, but abroad.

* * *

Foreign Representative John F. Poole, now in Amsterdam, mailed the AMERICAN a postal card announcing the work he is doing for his organization in Holland.

* * *

The great crowds that are always around the Cadillac exhibition in the Motor Mart section testified that is recorded this particular car by individuals. No matter what the time may be, there are always a large number of interested people in this exhibit. It was remarked today that if the show continued much longer Manager Alfred Measure would be forced to re-carpet his entire exhibition space.

* * *

Manager Kingsley, of the Burbank motor cloth, has rather an unusual exhibit in Paul Revere Hall. A tank has been made from a piece of motor cloth filled with water and during the week Japanese ducks have disported therein, to the great amusement of thousands.

* * *

Manager Hamilton, of the Federal Rubber Manufacturing Company, spent yesterday being shown the fine points of the exhibition by Chase Langmaid and Guy Wilkes, two live wires who are ever watchful of the Federal interests in New England.

* * *

Manager Biddell, of the Stewart-Warner Corporation, has done a great amount of business during the show, as well he might, when it is remembered what a large proportion of the cars exhibited are equipped with the instruments turned out by his company.

* * *

The Franklin exhibit, containing the only air-cooled car in the exhibition, has by no means been overlooked throughout the week. In fact, Manager Lawton says that never in his experience, and it dates back many years, has so great an interest been displayed as has been shown at this exhibit. He has taken quite a number of orders and feels that the week has been of great advantage to all of the dealers.

Harry Radford, vice-president and treasurer of the Carter-car Company of Detroit was tendered a banquet at the Georgian last evening by Thomas F. Barry and a number of other Cartercar owners. Mr. Barry was the purchaser of the first Cartercar sold in Boston and it was upon his recommendation that Mayor Fitzgerald added a number of these to the municipal fleet of cars.

On his last visit to Detroit Treasurer Radford entertained Mayor Burtt and a number of Boston visitors at an informal banquet at the Hotel Pontchartrain.

CLOSING SALES AT FINAL DAY OF AUTO SHOW

By J. C. KERRISON.

This, the closing day of the Automobile Show, finds everybody keyed up to the highest point. They are anxious to close up all orders and to bring the week to a successful end.

Show week is most trying on those who are actively identified with an exhibit, as it calls for considerable reserve and sustained effort to stand the full week out, responding to the unusual demands upon time and energy.

The position of a motor salesman requires no end of patience, although it is not, in these days of enlightenment, as great a task as formerly, when the average New England public has become more and more familiar with the motor as a mechanical proposition. It is fully appreciative of what can be expected of a car and the salesman who can tell the merits of what a few years ago would have been ludicrous questions.

The purchaser today is as keen to the real condition of affairs as the salesmen. Instead of looking at the body and passing his judgment as to the relative merits of a car from that one point alone, the purchaser of today knows what is under the bonnet, likewise what is under the body. He has developed from the primary principles and has got into the major questions of motor vehicles.

The public yesterday seemed no reaction in the attendance, the hall during the day being more crowded than ever, the interest centering around the actual sales transacted more.

Yesterday's storm brought the question of the proper equipment in the matter of tires and the various sides had their innings. The sedan car which was fitted with tires were considered at length, as was the matter of the closing night of the show to be get-away night. It is the get-away night, but not in the respect they imagine.

Threw Away His TRUSS!

Strenuous Old Sea Captain Fools the Doctors And Cures Himself.

No man, woman or child who is ruptured—no matter how severely or at what age—need despair of being cured.

Throws Away His Truss.

The case of Captain Collings gives encouragement for all sufferers from rupture. He suffered a double rupture—but was confined to his bed for years. Physicians examined his case and pronounced an operation necessary, but he kept experimenting on himself. Finally to the astonishment of all, he cured his rupture entirely and never had any return of the trouble.

Capt. Collings sends his system to ruptured people. If you will send the coupon below, (or copy it) he will send you entirely FREE, a trial of his process, so you can test it in your own case. This costs you nothing, and no ruptured man, woman or child can afford to ignore it.

FREE TEST COUPON

Capt. W. A. Collings,
Box 19PT, Watertown, N. Y.

Please send me your new week's Test of your System for Rupture. This Test is to be FREE. I will commence using it at once.

PEOPLE'S LOBBY TO BACK DEMAND FOR 'L' INQUIRY

The principal topic of conversation at the State House today concerned the outcome of the "People's Lobby" which made a modest beginning last night toward an investigation of the Boston Elevated system.

What is called the Citizens' Committee of Greater Boston has been formed with Thomas A. Niland as chairman, and R. W. Lawler as secretary. This committee has been formed to perfect the organization or creation of a so-called "People's Lobby," which will become a permanent institution in Boston and have for its object the betterment of street railway facilities in the city.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

A Glorious St. Patrick's Day This Year

Not within a century's growth green upon the graves of its martyrs has the Ireland of St. Patrick looked out upon a fairer and more hopeful morning than comes to her in this stirring year of her chequered story.

One hundred and thirteen years ago the Irish Parliament was closed and Ireland's autonomy was merged in England's by the Act of Union, an act which the great tribune, Mr. Gladstone, denounced as a piece of political infamy, without a parallel.

The last scene in the Irish Parliament lives still in pictured story and tradition, where John Philpot Curran and Henry Grattan, before the last company of Irish freemen, thundered their passionate appeals.

Darkness fell on Ireland then, and the Green Isle went down into the long night of poverty and oppression on which English landlordism rose. "It was the most distressful country that men had ever seen."

But not for a day did the hero spirit of the unconquerable race surrender to the wreck of Irish liberty. The lights that came out within the century night of sorrow have flecked every one of the hundred years with stars that will shine in the firmament of immortal names.

The bruised shamrock gave forth its sweetness to enrich the breath of history, and the great names of Ireland's shadow are among the great names of time.

Out of this darkened century Erin wrote the chivalric epitaph, "She has fought successfully in all battles but her own." And from a thousand battlefields her dauntless emeralds flashed in the forefront of historic victories in which the laurels and the loot were for other nations than herself.

In all history no race has ever more patiently and bravely led the forlorn hope of parliamentary battle for home rule and a people's liberty against the imbedded and embuttressed obstinacy of English greed.

Shadows of night, shadows of persecution and shadows of death and shame fell, but did not falter her unswerving statesmen in their determined work. From lip to lip, from heart to heart, the Irish evangel lived—caught from the dying lips of Emmet, on, on to the matchless eloquence of O'Connell, and passing through the incarnate statesmanship of Charles Stewart Parnell, straight to the inspired advocacy of our own John Redmond of today.

And now the dawn has come! "Unarm Eros"! The long, dark night has gone. Over the morning breaks the sunburst above the sea of green.

The English House of Commons, with more than a hundred votes to spare, has passed the Home Rule bill! One more swift passage sure and soon to come will override the stubborn lords, and the battle will be won. The roll of the Irish Parliament will be called within fifteen months upon College Green.

It is a great race, and a great victory that makes an epoch in the human chronicle—a new and greater Ireland, and a new and better England than the world has known.

In the words of that gifted historian, Alice Stopford Green, Ireland is coming back. The day is near for a union of all her children that are born under the breadth of her skies, fed by the richness of her fields, nourished by the civilization of her dead.

And in this swift coming day—with the crushing weight of alien landlords lifted from her emerald sod, with the shameless scandal of incapacity banished from her radiant face, with her statesmen once more in her historic halls, her financiers resetting her economic problems to the people's needs, her farmers striking new plenty from her soil, and the light shining in all her splendid life—the dear, incomparable island shall put her shadowed past behind her and wreathe once more her immortal shamrock around the brow of genius, poetry and song.

So here's to you, Ft. Patrick! And the top of the topmost morning that has dawned on Ireland in a hundred years.

Park Board Should Recognize Brookline Public Spirit

The attention of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners has been called to a small plot of land lying at the corner of Beacon and Washington streets, in Brookline, which is much needed as an entrance to the public playground adjacent to the Michael Driscoll School.

The residents of the neighborhood are that public-spirited and that keen for the improvement that they have raised a fund of $7,000 toward the $25,000 necessary to purchase the land.

The Park Commissioners should examine the situation carefully and aid that part of Brookline to keep its residential appearance and at the same time add another pretty breathing spot to the fast growing metropolitan park system.

No city or town can have too many parks. Besides, the spirit shown by the Brooklinites, who are willing to give from their own pockets toward a public improvement, should be recognized and encouraged.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

"CONTEMPLATING MATRIMONY"

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The article by Dorothy Dix which was printed a few days ago, entitled "Contemplating Matrimony" was a treat and impressed me greatly.

I should think that the article ought to be cut out and pasted on heavy cardboard and posted on the bulletin board, in every young men's club in the United States, where it can be easily seen and read.

This would tend to cut out hasty marriages, which so often develop into divorces, sooner or later.

The article seems to have a human touch to it, when the young men are addressed as "My Son," "My Boy," "My Dear."

A debt of gratitude should be given to Madam Dix by every mother of a young son.

Yours respectfully,

"Johnny, I think these Talking Movies of mine are slick! I call it the Hotairograph! It really does me good to see those teeth of Theodore's again! Woodrow's relatives make him awfully sore! They all want jobs! Do you notice that all the time that gink with the mallet is talking he's picking out the best place to hit the Professor? As for my old New York friend Grafty, he's getting in worse all the time! If they convict him on all the charges against him he ought to get out of jail in about a hundred and sixty years with commutation for good behavior!"

The Wonderful Nature of Dreams and Dream Prophecies Is Still a Puzzle to Scientists

A German Neurologist Avers That It Is a Good Thing to Dream When You Sleep, as Dreams Refresh the Mind—Occurrences Foretold in Sleep Visions Are Still Beyond Human Understanding

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

Is it better to dream, or not to dream?

If you do NOT dream your hours of sleep are absolute vacancies, or great empty chasms, yawning, at regular intervals, across the whole width of your life.

If you DO dream the river of your life is divided between overground and underground passages, and some persons find those hours that are passed in sunless caverns, "measureless to man," far more fascinating than the others.

Ordinarily, however, people think that dreamless sleep is to be preferred, on the supposition that it is more restful and refreshing. But a German neurologist, Dr. S. Freude, holds the opposite opinion, and, on the basis of my own experience, I am disposed to agree with him.

If the dreams are pleasant, says Dr. Freude, they are an agreeable stimulus to the brain cells, which remains after the sleeper awakes. They have the beneficial effect of play, which recuperates by the simple change of occupation. Deep, dreamless slumber, on the other hand, stupefies by its total relaxation, and the awakening sleeper must collect his energies and set them going again.

You Can Train Yourself to Face Even Dreadful Nightmares

No doubt much depends upon peculiarities of temperament, and dreaming may be good for some persons and bad for others. Even Dr. Freude would admit that uneasy, disturbing or terrifying dreams usually have an ill effect, but, then, he holds that, in general, dreams are of an agreeable nature, and again I think he is right.

For my own part I confess that I rather like, occasionally, a daunting, fear-breeding dream. THEY are inspiring, too, when you feel that you are passing through them without any undue, or disgraceful, exhibition of sheer fright. You can train yourself to face even a nightmare with a certain degree of moral courage, which you will recall, with satisfaction, when the vision is gone. Thus terrifying dreams may be made to afford a certain degree of that moral education which in waking life is only obtained by those who pass through scenes of real peril and terror.

Dreams, Dr. Freude observes, are normally the imaginary fulfilment of desires and wishes that lurk deep in the soul. While the dream lasts the control of reason is released. In a dream one is in chaos, and in chaos nothing is chaotic, because chaos knows no law. But what are law and chaos but opposed IDEAS, and how can we say that one is any more real than the other?

Execution of Major Andre Was Foretold in a Dream

Some philosophers assert that the things which seem to us the most real are in truth the most UN-real!

Yet there is an intimate connection between dreams and waking life. Many dreams are distorted memories of actual occurrences, and many are suggested by such occurrences. There is a widespread belief that dreams are often portents, or forewarnings. The books are full of most interesting instances which seem to lend support to this view.

Take the case of the unfortunate Major Andre, who was hanged as a spy by the order of Washington. Before Major Andre set sail for America he went to visit a Miss Seward in Derbyshire. She presented him to two of her friends, a poet named Newton and a clergyman named Cunningham. When Newton saw the stranger he started and turned pale. The cause of his sudden emotion came out after the Major had departed. Mr. Newton, the very night before, had had a dream, which he had immediately related to the clergyman. He thought he was in a strange forest through which he saw a horseman passing in haste. Suddenly three men started out of a thicket and arrested the horseman. Newton was so much interested by the prisoner's face and felt so much sympathy for him that he awoke greatly disturbed. Presently he fell asleep again, and the same person now appeared to him, surrounded by a crowd of people, and was led to a gallows, where he was hanged. When Major Andre was presented to Newton he instantly recognized the man of his dream. Not long afterward occurred the historic arrest of Andre in the woods at Tarrytown, followed by his execution at Tappan.

Take the case of Dr. Harvey, the celebrated discoverer of the circulation of the blood. When he was a young man he set out from London to go to Padua, in Italy, the seat of the famous university where he wished to study. When he got to Dover the Governor refused to let him enter his packet to cross the channel, but declined to give any reason. The next day news arrived at Dover that the packet had been lost with every soul on board. Then the Governor explained his strange conduct. He said that he had had a dream, of overwhelming force, in which he was forbidden to allow a young man, whose face appeared to him, to enter the boat. When Harvey presented himself the Governor recognized the face seen in his dream.

Science Does Not Know How to Deal with Prophetic Dreams

If there were space I could quote hundreds of similar instances, which have all the appearance of being perfectly authenticated. Science does not know yet how to deal with such things.

Read the story of Swedenborg's wonderful dreams; run through the Bible and read of the warning dreams which abound there; recall the strange poem about Kubla Khan which Coleridge composed in a dream, and you will have an abundance of food for thought and speculation. And then, perhaps, you will look upon your dreams with increased interest.

Contemplating Matrimony

What Place Has a Dresden Statuette in Your Scheme of Life?

By DOROTHY DIX

My Dear Billy—And so you are in love with Annette and you are thinking of asking her to marry you. I don't blame you for being bewitched by her, son. She's as pretty and as dainty and as fragile as a Dresden statuette. And just about as practical and useful.

I don't blame you for wanting her. You want her on the eternal human principle that makes us all prefer the luxuries to the necessaries of life; but if you get her, what are you going to do with her, son? What place has a Dresden statuette in your scheme of life? Annette would make a perfectly lovely parlor ornament for some rich man's home, but the only home you can offer your wife is the home of a poor man where there will be no space for a parlor ornament for many a year to come, but where there will be a crying need for serviceable kitchenware.

Try, at least, in selecting a wife to show as much intelligence as you would display in buying your clothes, or ordering a meal. You wouldn't spend your money for silk socks and patent leather shoes if you were purchasing footwear in which to tramp a thousand miles. Neither would you expect to be able to stay your stomach on a diet composed wholly of chocolate eclairs. Yet these would not be more incongruous and idiotic performances than for a poor man, who has his way to make in the world, to pick out for himself a society butterfly for a wife.

The kind of a wife you need is one that will be a help and not a hindrance to you, that will be a booster and not a millstone about your neck. What you need is not an ethereal being to whom you can quote poetry, but a husky helpmeet who can wrestle with the pots and pans and butcher's bills and teething babies without bothering you about them.

Believe me, son, that while temperament is very alluring in a lady love, it is excess baggage in a wife, and the less she has of it the faster you will travel. You will have your work in getting on in the world cut out for you without having to stop to smooth down the sensibilities of a wife who is too fine and good for human nature's daily food.

Consider Annette and the way she has been brought up. I am not saying a word against the girl. She has my earnest pity, for she is the victim of the fool American custom that makes fond parents cultivate champagne tastes and habits in their daughters, on beer incomes. She is a Dollar Princess without even a dollar.

She can't cook. She can't sew. She can't clean up a house. She can't do one useful thing on earth. If you put her where your wife belongs, in a little flat, where it's her business to make you a comfortable home, she will give you dyspepsia with her cooking; she will bring nervous prostration on you with her tears, and she will break your heart with her complaints. You will stand it for a little while, hoping that she will learn the things about housework that you thought all women were born knowing, trusting that she will comprehend that your whole future success in life depends upon your having a comfortable and serene home, and upon your working and saving when you're young.

But she will never learn. Things will go from bad to worse, and then in desperation, beaten, you will give up the fight and join the army of miserable loafers about hotels, whose wives are too lazy to do anything but press a button to have their wants supplied, and who spend their days hunting bargains, going to matinees and playing bridge. And the husbands of these women are just one lap ahead of the wolf, and are bound for the poorhouse.

If you marry Annette that will be your fate, son, but I conjure you, be a sport. Don't complain. A woman is more or less entitled to kick about the sort of husband she gets, because she had to take what was offered her. A man's wife is of his own picking. She represents his tastes and his judgment, and if he deliberately selects a fashion plate, or a parlor ornament, he hasn't any right to complain that she isn't a washing machine, or a gas range, when he gets her home.

Marriage works no miracles in a woman's character, my boy. What she was before the wedding ceremony was read over her she is after marriage. Only more so, for marriage is like a mordant. It sets the dye of a woman's nature.

If a girl is pretty and silly and frivolous before marriage, she will be silly and frivolous and not pretty after marriage. If, before marriage, she spends her days reclining on a couch reading novels while her mother does the cooking, after marriage she'll still recline on a couch while her husband goes out to the delicatessen store and buys a pick-up dinner after an exhausting day's work.

And, by the same token, the girl who is sensible and helpful and practical and competent, who is a good daughter, and a good sister before marriage, will make a wife whose price is beyond rubies.

Furthermore, son, I would call your attention to the fact that Annette is as delicate and fragile as a hothouse flower. There's something in that very weakness that strikes a chivalric chord in a strong man's breast, and makes him want to shelter her from all the storms of life.

It's a lovely sentiment, my boy, but fatal to act upon, for of all misfortunes that can happen to a man the very worst is to be tied down to a sickly wife.

If sickness comes after marriage, and the wife becomes an invalid, a husband's duty is to comfort and sustain her as well as he can. That is an unavoidable misfortune, and must be borne as such, but no man need hunt for trouble, as he does when he picks out a delicate woman for a wife.

The moral of all which is, son, to select the kind of a wife you need and can afford. If you've got a parlor mantelpiece, then the Dresden statuette may be all right. Otherwise stick to serviceable delft.

DOROTHY DIX.
